City librarians lose round in budget cut fight

OFFICIALS OF Monterey Peninsula cities have apparently failed to win over a key ally in their drive to prevent proposed cuts in county reimbursements to city libraries.

Monterey County Administrator Richard Andrews, after meeting with city officials and librarians, said Jan. 19, "at this time I concur with the consultant's recommendation."

Consultant David Sabsay has recommended that Monterey County adopt a new formula for reimbursements to city libraries that provide services to non-city residents.

If adopted, the new formula would mean a loss of $130,000 to Carmel's Harrison Memorial Library.

A budget cut of that size would mean cutbacks and possible curtailment of city library services to patrons living outside the Carmel city limits, head librarian Peg Richter said.

Andrews said he had "hoped" that city and county libraries could consolidate services to save money, but that the city libraries are too "independent thinking" to accept such a proposal.

"My primary concern is whether or not it is feasible to come up with a more cooperative arrangement. At this point, it does not appear to be practical. The various libraries want to operate independently," Andrews said.

Andrews said his Jan. 18 meeting with city officials and librarians failed to convince him that there was a better alternative to the consultant's recommendations.

However, Andrews added that he has not prepared his final recommendation and that if "new justifications" are proposed, he would consider a change in stance.

Asked to respond to Andrews' comments, Mrs. Richter said: "That's a position he did not verbalize in our meeting. Basically, the meeting did leave us at somewhat of an impasse. However, I feel it did leave us with some room to compromise."

Andrews did reject a counter-proposal made by city librarians, which would require the county to reimburse city libraries for the direct costs of services to non-city resident patrons, Mrs. Richter said. She said she could not elaborate on specifics of the counter-proposal because it may come up in future negotiations.

Andrews said he expects the Board of Supervisors to schedule a public hearing on the issue Feb. 15 or Feb. 22.

The Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees is expected to discuss these latest developments when it meets Tuesday, Jan. 26 at City Hall.

Responds to editorial

Dear Editor:

Your Jan. 14 editorial on a crisis at the Harrison Memorial Library in Carmel serves a useful purpose in drawing attention to the complex and important problem regarding county support for the services that have been provided traditionally to the increasing number of library patrons who live outside the Carmel city limits.

A special study recently completed for the Monterey County library system proposes a considerable and expensive development of the county system, and a drastic reduction in payments to city libraries for services rendered to county residents. To understand the problem created for Carmel, certain basic facts, which are not provided in your editorial, must be kept in mind.

First, Carmel is a General Law city. Under state law for such cities, a library board of trustees is partially independent of city government. Its members are, indeed, appointed by the mayor and confirmed by the council, but the Board of Trustees prepares the library budget, appoints the staff, receives and manages gifts, and carries on negotiations with the county. It should be understood that the funds available for library expansion come from gifts to the library, and could not be used for any of the laudable civic activities mentioned in the editorial.

Second, Carmel taxpayers are not "taking it on the chin" for library services extended to the larger area around the city under present arrangements with the county, and they will not under a new proposal which is under consideration. It should be understood that the exceptional services provided by the Harrison Memorial Library are not cheap, but they are services which the patrons have wanted, have used, and have appreciated. The library is open longer hours, has more books and periodicals immediately available, and provides better reference services than would be expected in any ordinary city of only 5,000 people. It has a very able staff, and a very special building.

All this is possible for two reasons. One is the generosity of library patrons. Over the years several quite large gifts and bequests have been increased by many small donations. The organized "Friends of the Harrison Memorial Library" have been most useful.

The other is the arrangement with Monterey County for serving the increasing number of county residents in the Carmel area. It is not easy to negotiate a formula for estimating the additional cost of providing library service to these additional patrons, but Carmel taxpayers and Pine Cone readers can be assured that this is now being worked on in a careful and responsible way.

The income received through the county makes possible a higher level of service for all library users, whether they live in the city or in the county.

The help of the Pine Cone in keeping its readers informed on library matters is most appreciated.

"Scare" tactics?

Dear Editor:

The article which appeared in the Jan. 7 issue of the Pine Cone/Outlook would lead one to believe that if the recommendations of the library use study undertaken by the county were implemented, non-city patrons will be barred from Harrison Library.

This is highly unlikely. In so doing, Harrison would cut itself off from funds which are paid to a library which serves non-patrons by the California Library Services Act. No service would equal no funds paid.

The article further stated that the county's proposal would bring about duplication of services and a lack of cooperation among the libraries. Rather, the study proposes a higher level of standardization and cooperation which would lead to less duplication, not more.

The city libraries of Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove are presently receiving about 25 percent of the County Library budget, while the county has no control over the way those funds are spent. Under the study's proposals the county would be able to allocate part of these funds toward badly needed upgrading and standardization of county library services, including a new branch in the Carmel area.

Since these county funds are determined as a percentage of the city libraries' operating budget, they can increase faster than the budget as a whole. The current state of the county library budget makes this situation dangerous. City libraries have a greater ability to fund their library needs than do rural areas. The study was not trying to cut off the city libraries but rather to find a way to make the situation more equitable, something that cannot be done under the present arrangement. All library patrons have something to gain from more efficient and cost-effective library operations.

Monterey County is unique in its support of independent city libraries. Other counties do not provide such funds.

The study indicates that county residents will not be "the biggest losers" as implied in the article. Instead they will gain substantially if the study is implemented. The intent of the "loser" statements appears to be to scare non-resident users into lobbying the Supervisors against these proposed changes.

Thanks woodsmen

Dear Editor:

I am constantly amazed at the selfless devotion of our city workers, and I think it my duty to single out one group in particular: the Department of Public Works, Division of Forestry.

Rarely have I seen such speedy, efficient service from any group of men. Greg D'Ambrosio is to be complimented for the wonderful spirit pervading his little band of woodsmen.

Thanks, guys, from all of us Carmelites.

Cut off aid to Guatemala

Dear Editor:

The U.S. stopped killing Indians long ago; but by supporting the savage military regime in Guatemala, we assist in the wholesale murder of innocent Mayan Indians.

American helicopters, part of the aid granted to Guatemala's cruel dictatorship, are used to systematically exterminate vast numbers of Indians — not in front of camera-toting tourists but off-stage in isolated villages.

Countless unarmed Mayan families are slaughtered in a most ruthless way; not for any subversive action as the Guatemalan butchers would like us to believe, but because greedy speculators, including U.S. oil companies, covet their lands. Busy America may look away, but we can never wash away Mayan bloodstains on our national consciousness.

If the U.S. lacks the moral strength to focus the spotlight on this genocidal mess, then the United Nations must step forward.

Incoming U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar should teach Guatemala's brutal rulers how his own country, Peru, protects and respects the basic rights of the Incan Indians. He must demand that human rights be given to the Mayas. If Guatemala refuses to comply with the U.N. charter, it should be ostracized by international society.

Meanwhile, what can you do? Burning a candle isn't enough. We must pressure Congress to cut off all aid to these U.S. trained military cutthroats.

About that raise

Dear Editor:

The speed with which the Carmel Unified School District Board approved the superintendent's proposed salary increase was truly amazing. The decision appeared to have been made beforehand. Requested and granted by the board members (the exception was Barbara Sanford) was a 5.25 percent increase, retroactive to July 1, 1981, and a 2.5 percent contingency, also retroactive. This increase is the second in 18 months, the present salary being $43,200.

Mr. Rand also felt that he should be provided with a car, (I wonder if it was to be a new or used vehicle) but wisely he decided against it. Instead he only requested a mere $150 a month for an allowance. Also granted in that package was an extra paid holiday — he has now 14 — and a membership in the Association of California School Administrators, and Blue Cross family coverage.

The latter I accept as necessary, but the other requests I consider at least partially excessive. Particularly in view of the fact that several classes at Carmel River School are highly overcrowded. Some of them have 36 children to one teacher. I was told that there was no money to add an extra teacher, as the district is operating on a tight budget!

The point has also been made that districts similar in size to ours, in our area, pay higher salaries. This may well be true, however, the superintendent in question has been with his district for over 10 years and is the holder of a Ph.D. Besides, it could be that this district is in a better financial position, and can afford to pay accordingly.

Many people and private organizations (FOCUS) have in the past contributed to our schools either by donating time (parent volunteering), materials and or money. These citizens must be particularly confounded by the board's ill-advised action.

However, our schools are in need of funds and materials, and we have to continue to give them our support. At the same time, we have to keep an eye on our elected board, and see to it that they follow their slogan of "fiscal responsibility," and distribute public monies accordingly.

City of Carmel holds vise grip on CV Master Plan

By AL EISNER

"Environmentalists in driver's seat on CV Master Plan," was the title of my column in the July 23, 1981 edition of this newspaper. The column was a commentary on the reaction by the city of Carmel to the Environmental Impact Report prepared by Monterey County for the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The city found grave flaws in the document which was drafted only after the city sued the county.

I wrote: "The most significant new element introduced in the mountain of commentary on the EIR is attorney Zan Henson's instructions to the county to be ready to halt all development when certain environmental standards are exceeded."

On Tuesday night, the city council gave its endorsement to Henson's written comments on the EIR. That document restates the demand for "trip mechanisms" that would halt development when pollution reaches certain levels.

"Failure to provide these mechanisms goes to the very heart of the California Environmental Quality Act," Henson says. He goes on to state that consideration of these trigger mechanisms was necessary, because of the language of the state law. "Omission of any analysis of those mitigation measures which includes a failure to indicate whether such measures were adequate to avoid significant adverse environmental impact, or whether such measures were even capable of implementation makes a mockery of the final EIR process."

Henson was a staff attorney for the Attorney General's office and worked on many environmental cases before he moved to Carmel. He is very familiar with the law. And, since the city seems willing to follow his recommendations, it seems likely that a clash will result if the county does not agree to amend the EIR to conform with his recommendations. That clash could be bloody. It could be prolonged and costly too.

My July column concluded:

"The next few months should be very interesting. County officials are in the unhappy position of operating under the watchful — and sometimes capricious eyes — of the five members of the Carmel City Council. And, it looks like the city is ready to "hang tough" on the quality and the quantity of development that will ultimately be allowed in Carmel Valley."

Need I say more?

Bunco artists invade Carmel

By BARNEY LAIOLO

It has come to my attention that some of our residents have been "hooked" by some enterprising "con artists." In times like these people are inclined to believe some of these easy money schemers. They advertise in papers and magazines about the "Do-It-At-Home" plans where they profess that you can earn "easy" money.

Some of these plans include addressing envelopes at home or making plastic gizmoes, etc., and promise "big returns" on small investments. Don't be fooled! Investigate well before sending any money.

Some of the other "gimmicks" are salesmen who come to your door and offer to spray your roof or patch your driveway. They use the approach that they are doing a job close by and have some material left over and can give you a special price. Again, don't be fooled! They usually use some aluminum paint and crankcase oil which actually creates a possible fire hazard. Again, before you sign or agree — investigate.

Then there is the super salesman who approaches older citizens on the subject of investing their money in "high interest" second and third deeds of trust. Please take note that not all people involved in this business are questionable as there are some very reputable people involved in these projects.

I would recommend that anyone interested in this type of investment should deal only with well-established firms, and if they do get involved it would be suggested that the contract be reviewed by a good attorney.

Last week's Pine Cone included an article about a proposal by John Logan to put into ordinance form the control of water usage in the City of Carmel. I agree that water use control should be seriously considered. I am still of the conviction that when the original allocation of water to Carmel was considered we were short changed. The allocations were determined on the basis of readings taken when we were allocated 50 gallons per person per day.

I also feel that although we have a population of less than 5,000, little consideration was given to the visitor uses of the 15,000 or so extra persons who come daily.

I do not feel that our present allocation is set in concrete and I intend to do whatever is necessary to correct this situation. Consider for a moment that we are 95 percent built, with relatively few more hookups required and compare this to the potential growth of Carmel Valley, Monterey and Seaside. I insist that a much better allocation is due us. I'll do my best to get our share.

Smiling on,
Mayor Barney

Photo store license may be revoked

By FLORENCE MASON

THE BUSINESS License and Code Review Board will decide Feb. 11 whether Carmel Photoart can continue to do business at its Ocean Avenue location.

At its Jan. 14 meeting, the board said it needed more time to gather information about the activities of the company.

With the cooperation of owners Martin Fox and Arnold Bernstein, an accountant will look at Photoart's books; obtain names of the people to whom gallery pictures have been sold; and review price lists and other data.

The purpose of the inquiry is to determine if the business is operated "in a manner not consistent with the description of the proposed manner of operation as approved by the board at the time the business license was issued," or if it is "operating a business in a manner conflicting with the adopted plans and laws of the city."

The key question is the relative importance of two separate activities conducted by Photoart in its Paradise mall location, Ocean and Dolores: the sale of photographs from its gallery and photo processing. If photo processing is proven to be the primary activity of Photoart, it could be banned because it is not legal in that zone. The operation of a photo gallery is permited.

At the Jan. 14 hearing Building Inspector Ron Warren stepped down from his board seat at the request of City Attorney George Brehmer because he had been the city's investigating officer.

Warren produced a number of photographs showing both exterior and interior signs and other aspects of the business. Various advertisements were also put into the record of the hearing, which was conducted in a formal manner by Brehmer.

Key questions discussed during the hearing concerned the number and assignments of employees between the two activities; advertising for the processing operation and for the gallery; and percentage of business ascribed to the various aspects of the business.

APPEARING AT the hearing — admittedly as a competitor of Photoart as well as to provide information to the board — was David Muston, owner of Carmel Camera Center on Fifth and San Carlos. Muston said that soon after Photoart opened in August, 1981, he came to City Hall to protest the operation, believing it was primarily photo processing.

He suggested that Photoart was just a branch of Click Photo, a chain of photo-finishing plants. He said that on one of his visits to the store there were no photos on the walls of the gallery. He mentioned a former employee of Photoart who, he said, told him that there was usually an employee "baby-sitting" the gallery but that photographs were taken off the walls when no one could be there, because employees of other Paradise shops and delivery people had access to the gallery, which is in the basement area.

Muston also claimed that when he and Fox discussed the matter, Fox admitted the gallery was a "dodge" to get around the city's zoning laws and offered to send Muston some business if he would cease complaining to City Hall.

Martin Fox had a different account of his conversation with Muston. He said that Muston told him he'd be out of business in a couple of weeks and that Muston offered to leave him alone, suggesting that he (Muston) be made a consultant to Photoart.

Fox also told the board that his landlord had not advised him that photo processing, as a primary business activity, would not be allowed in that zone.

He stated that Click Photo in San Francisco is a completely separate entity; the confusion in names came about because "Click Photo" was the first name proposed by himself and Bernstein for their Carmel store.

This was not approved by the BLCRB and the name was changed to Carmel Photoart. Because the corporation had already been set up as Click Photo, the owners kept that name for corporate purposes only — "Click Photo dba Carmel Photoart" is used only as the legal name of this (Carmel) operation.

Fox pointed out that a major advertisement for the George Hurrel photographs appeared in Monterey Life magazine and that references to the gallery were made, albeit in smaller print, in other advertising for the store. He said that was a judgment on their part as to what would draw potential customers into the store and thus, to the gallery. He added that they did the best they could to advertise the gallery in window signs and within the store, based on city limitations for the number, size and placement of signs.

THE OWNERS presented the following figures for the period from their opening in August through December to summarize the store's activity:

Retail sales (including the gallery) . . 45.7%
Sale of darkroom supplies (paper, chemicals, etc.) 14.9%
One-hour processing 25.9%
Out-lab processing 13.5%

However, they were unable to break down the first figure to show the specific percent of business generated by the gallery alone, or the number of gallery photographs sold. They added that it would be difficult to determine the exact contribution to net income of any one part of the business, since employee salaries and other expenses are not apportioned among the several activities.

Fox said they were trying to find a consultant to help operate the gallery, as it was too much for them to cover by themselves.

Mark Sterling, manager of the store, also spoke. He said it was easy for customers to see the gallery sign and the stairs leading down to it; also, that there was rarely a time when none of the employees was free to accompany a customer to the gallery.

Martin Fox told the board that all the bookkeeping is done in Los Angeles. Attorney Brehmer's estimate that it would take about one month to gather the information needed for the board's consideration led to agreement for continuance to Feb. 11.

(Editor's note: the issue was incorrectly referred to in an earlier edition as a "court" case when in fact the action was a hearing before the Business License and Code Review Board.)

Mrs. Odello labels LCP 'shocking'

A COMPROMISE version of the Carmel area Local Coastal Program would permit some development on the eastern Odello Ranch and limited subdivisions south of the Carmel River.

The draft of the revised LCP — the result of meetings between Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley and county and coastal staff — was released last week.

The Citizens Advisory Committee which helped draft the original county LCP denied by the Coastal Commission in September will review the revised plan and forward comments to the county. The committee meets at 7:30 p.m. today (Jan. 21) at the Highlands Inn.

The Board of Supervisors has scheduled a public hearing Feb. 1 on the revised LCP, in advance of consideration by the Coastal Commission meeting of March 3-5 in Carmel.

These are key features of the revised plan:

• Development of a maximum of 58 visitor-serving units on a nine-acre "blister" on the eastern 134 acres of the Odello Ranch, only if that land is not needed for flood control purposes.

• New land subdivisions south of the Carmel River to permit twice the number of existing residential units, to a maximum of 575 new units — about 200 fewer units than recommended in the county plan.

• Provision of access to and along Malpaso and Yankee Beaches as a condition of future land use permits in those areas.

• Limitation on the types of permitted flood protection devices.

• Permission for the state Department of Parks and Recreation to install a parking lot on state property northeast of San Jose Creek Beach.

The original Carmel area LCP submitted by Monterey County would have allowed development of 90 residential housing units on the Odello east property, plus 157 motel units, a farmer's market and a restaurant.

Coastal Commission staff recommended designation of the Odello east land as prime agricultural land upon which no development would be permitted. That condition has now been softened — slightly.

The revised LCP recommends development at a maximum density of six residential or visitor-serving units per acre on the nine-acre "blister" portion of Odello east considered less agriculturally productive.

"Permanent development may occur on the blister only after a determination is made by the county that the land is not needed for flood control purposes and the development will be adequately protected from flood hazard by protective measures consistent with a flood plain management program," the draft LCP states.

A SEVEN-MEMBER citizen committee has been appointed by the Board of Supervisors to review flood control measures proposed in a recent consultant's study of the lower Carmel River.

Kirk Wheeler, project engineer with George S. Nolte Engineers of San Jose — which prepared the study — said major flood control measures or massive landfill would be necessary to permit development on Odello east.

The Lower Carmel River Citizens Advisory Committee will recommend a modification of the restriction of development to the nine-acre "blister" to permit development elsewhere on the Odello east land, county flood control engineer Bob Smith said.

"The committee will recommend modification to the LCP to allow the Odellos to transfer development rights from the 'blister' to another area of the Odello east property," Smith said. "The 'blister' is right in the middle of the floodway. Some other area that could be made flood-proof is more logical."

An agreement to permit the "blister" to be flooded in exchange for development rights elsewhere on the Odello property would permit a minimal flood protection program at very little cost, Smith said.

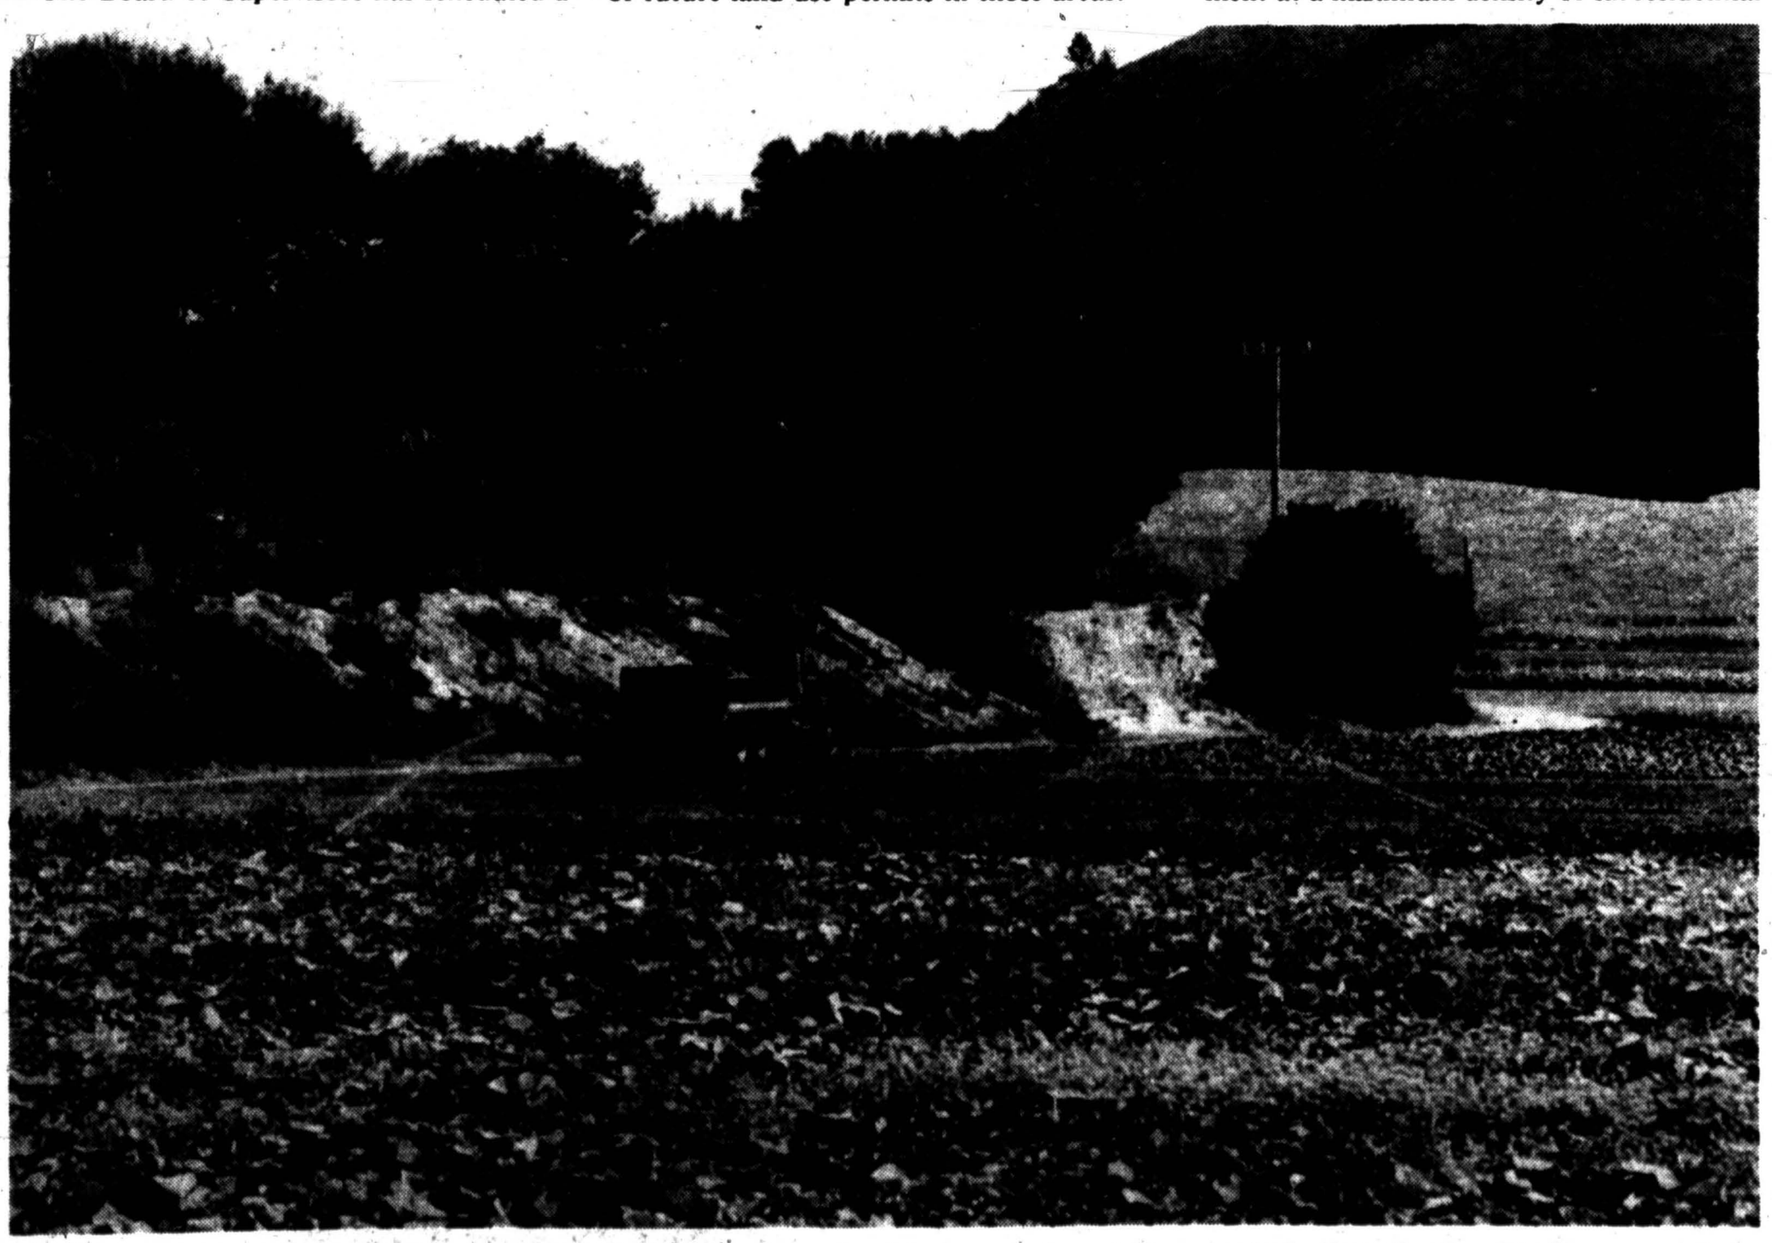

"If we can get development off that 'blister' and into some other area, there's a good chance we can negotiate floodage easements with the Odellos," he said.

The conditions proposed in the revised LCP would permit temporary visitor-serving development on the Odello east "blister" before or in place of any flood-control measures, if the temporary use is approved by the flood control district.

Mrs. Bruna Odello said she was "furious" when she read the revised LCP. She delivered a letter to the Citizens Advisory Committee at its Jan. 14 meeting at the Highlands Inn, in which she called the new plan "an astounding, shocking outrage."

"After 14 years of our giving compromise and the outcome of the agricultural land preserve plan which we felt satisfied the legal

THE EASTERN Odello Ranch property south of Carmel could be developed — but at a greatly-reduced level — in the Carmel area Local Coastal Program conditions recommended by the Coastal Commission staff. Development of 58 units on a nine-acre "blister" would be permitted only if that portion of the land isn't needed for flood control. One flood control proposal is to lower the levee (visible to left of truck) on the Carmel River to permit flooding of part of the eastern 134 acres of the Odello property.

Valley Service Center proposal is attacked

DEVELOPERS of a proposed 30,000 sq. ft. service center at Valle Vista and Carmel Valley Road in Carmel Valley plan to apply for a building permit within a week.

But the Monterey County planning department will require environmental review of the project unless it's scaled down to 2,500 sq. ft. or less in total area, said Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon.

The project envisions a total of 30,000 sq. ft. of space in two buildings at 55 E. Carmel Valley Rd. which would house plumbers, electricians, carpenters, contractors and their equipment. A portion of the space would be rented to retail businesses.

The 7.5-acre parcel where the project is planned is zoned C-1 commercial, since the Carmel Valley Master Plan — which would have rezoned the site one-acre rural residential (RR-1) — was suspended by court order.

"They can do whatever is categorically exempt under state environmental quality laws," Slimmon said. County planning staff has determined that any structure of more than 2,500 sq. ft. would require environmental review under state law, Slimmon said.

Jim Shakal, one of the developers, said a 2,500 sq. ft. service center wouldn't be economically feasible and he plans to pursue the 30,000 sq. ft. size.

The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association went on record last week in favor of five locations for service centers in Carmel Valley. They include:

- The proposed site at Valle Vista and Carmel Valley Roads.
- Carmelo School on Carmel Valley Road, which will be vacant in June.
- Sycamore Farm located at the base of Laureles Grade Road and Carmel Valley Road.
- The Holt property at the foot of Robinson Canyon Road, owned by the Carmel Unified School District.
- The Berwick property at the western edge of the Mid-Valley Shopping Center.

The CVPOA did not adopt the recommendation of a committee which investigated 12 alternate sites that the originally-proposed location would be the most feasible for the service center. Its recomendations will go to the Board of Supervisors by letter.

"We expect to put in an application for a building permit in a week or so," Shakal said. "We're encouraged by the fact that the CVPOA has recognized the need for a facility of this type in the Valley."

"The key is the size of the building," Slimmon explained. "We're not doing anything about the project until we receive some type of application. There really isn't anything the planning commission has to act on until then."

Wray Hiltabrand, who resides opposite the site of the proposed service center, circulated petitions to gather signatures of those opposed to the Valley Vista and Carmel Valley Road site.

Hiltabrand said Monday he had collected 329 petition signatures of Valley residents opposed to the service center at Valle Vista and Carmel Valley Roads.

The petition says the service center would cause traffic hazards, be unsightly, depress property values, and "subvert" the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

"A service center would require at least commercial zoning (C-1), more probably C-2 zoning for industry," the petition states. "Such use clearly subverts the purposes of the Master Plan.

"Trucks and other slow-moving vehicles entering and leaving will create a serious and dangerous traffic hazard and will not provide safe and unobtrusive access, as the Master Plan requires.

"The noise factor from vehicles and shop operations would be measurably and obnoxiously increased for the entire surrounding area because of the echo chamber effect of this very narrow section of the Valley. This violates Master Plan requirements for low noise impact on surrounding areas."

In addition to a building permit and environmental review by the planning commission, the project could necessitate grading, septic, and road encroachment permits.

Skillicorn wants auditor-controller post

CARMEL CITY TREASURER Jack Skillicorn has announced his candidacy for the office of Monterey County Auditor-Controller, which will become vacant when Stan Davis retires at the end of the year.

The official filing period opens Feb. 16, but Skillicorn has chosen to take out signature petition papers in lieu of paying a filing fee. He will need signatures of 1,901 registered Monterey County voters to be eligible for the June 8 ballot, according to the Monterey County elections office. The filing period closes March. 12.

"I happen to be, I guess, public oriented," Skillicorn said when asked why he wants to be auditor-controller. "This is my field. There are no very profound reasons.

"I'm interested in the public, watching and protecting the public. I believe I'm quite capable and have the background to do it (the job)."

As part of his duties with the city, Skillicorn invests funds and audits the bank statements. If elected, he said he would resign as City Treasurer.

Skillicorn has a private business and tax service in Carmel, which he operates jointly with his wife, Sandra. He also owns the restaurant "A Little Pizza Heaven."

Skillicorn said he could not comment on possible changes in the office of auditor-controller — if he is elected — until he has time to analyze its operations.

This is his second try at elected office. Skillicorn lost in the 1976 Carmel City Council election.

Skillicorn received his B.S. degree in accounting from Golden Gate University in San Francisco in 1969.

He has served as treasurer for the Monterey Peninsula Transit System. He had owned a business and tax service, and a pizza parlor, in Watsonville.

Skillicorn is a member of the National Society of Public Accountants, the National Society of Enrolled Agents (with the U.S. Treasury Department) and the California Society of Enrolled Agents.

He is also a member of the Carmel Advisory Committee to the Monterey County Planning Commission.

Skillicorn and his wife have one daughter, 13-year-old Margaret. They have lived in Carmel since 1969.

City may fence off Carmel beach areas

CARMEL BEACH may be ringed with a chain-link fence and resemble a "concentration camp" when merrymakers arrive for their Fourth of July bash this year.

That's one of the possibilities City Administrator Doug Peterson has in mind to blunt the destructive effects on beach embankments by Fourth of July visitors.

The problem is a year-round one, Peterson told Carmel City Council and Forestry Commission members in a joint work session last Wednesday. But it's particularly bad on the all-American Fourth of July holiday.

The last Independence Day celebration brought crowds estimated at 10,000 persons to the beach for a weekend of parties, drinking, fireworks, and sunbathing.

Erosion of the beach embankment west of Scenic Drive has been a chronic problem for which both the Forestry Commission and City Council have tried to find solutions for years.

In the joint work session, discussion naturally turned to methods to prevent people from climbing up and down the banks, which aggravates the erosion problem.

"We could put up a rental fence along Scenic Drive over the Fourth of July weekend for around $5,000," Peterson suggested. The idea would be to block access to the banks everywhere except at beach walkways, he said.

Councilman Mike Brown suggested planting the banks with poison oak as a way to discourage people from climbing on the embankment.

"If you ever had a daughter, like I do, who has to go to the hospital with sores all over her face from poison oak, you'd never bring that idea up again," said Councilman Howard Brunn.

Peterson said after the meeting he had mentioned the rental fence as a "trial balloon" to test the receptiveness of city officials.

"It might be something worth considering," Peterson said. "A physical barrier is about the only way you can do it. It would look like a concentration camp. But I will probably pursue that or something like it further before the Fourth of July."

"Nothing short of a 10-foot wall with concertina wire and spotlights will stop people from going over those banks," Peterson remarked.

Commissioners and council members discussed plans to construct a beach walkway on the western side of Scenic, which City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio said will be very expensive and will not provide any guarantee against bank erosion.

"Our concern is to accomplish something toward the erosion of that bank," said Forestry Commissioner Robert Evans. "But before we start on this we ought to have some idea of what the whole thing will cost."

Councilwoman Helen Arnold said the city should consider installation of several walkways separated by fences to keep people off the banks.

The City Council was to receive a recommendation from Peterson at its Tuesday meeting on selection of a designer for the walkway on the west side of Scenic Drive between 8th and Santa Lucia. Cost estimates also were to be presented.

49,995 tickets!

IF IT SEEMS like the uniformed ladies in the motor scooters are everywhere in Carmel these days, you're right.

The total number of parking tickets issued in 1981 was 49,995, with the bulk of those — 35,473 to be exact — for overtime parking.

In addition, the Carmel police department wrote 2,544 citations for moving traffic violations last year, for a grand total of 52,539 traffic tickets in 1981.

As Acting Police Chief Bob Fischer pointed out in his annual report, "1981 presented one of the greatest traffic burdens this city has ever experienced.

"It has been surveyed that the city of Carmel experiences an influx in excess of 50,000 people per day, each day, throughout the year. This past year would certainly seem to bear this out."

Faulty parking accounted for 8,416 of the tickets issued last year, while parking in loading zones was responsible for 1,614 citations, and parking in red zones for 1,587 tickets.

And if you're one of those folks who plays chalk roulette with the tire markings of the parking officers, here's a sobering thought: 63 citations were issued last year for tampering with those chalk tire markings.

If 1981 was a landmark year for traffic activity, it also was a time when crimes of violence waned, Fischer said in his annual report.

"Crime problems within the city are still comparatively low in relation to the surrounding communities," he indicated. "While burglary has shown a decrease (of 40 reported cases), armed robbery has shown a decrease (of three cases)."

The police department handled a total of 7,995 complaints in 1981 and made a total of 507 arrests for various offenses. Included in that total were 18 arrests for assault; seven for burglary; 170 for drunk driving and 38 for public intoxication; 33 drug arrests; one for extortion; three for fraud; and three for disturbing the peace.

A police "crackdown" on problems in the Scenic Drive area produced a number of arrests, Fischer reported.

"One of the more successful programs was the initiation of a 'special patrol' in the Scenic Drive and Del Mar areas," Fischer said in the report. "Since Oct. 14, 1981, there have been a total of 221 arrests or citations issued in that area alone.

"The majority of these have been for liquor or narcotic violations. The decrease in criminal activity has become very obvious."

Building credit policy is questioned

BIG SUR lands in the "critical viewshed," such as this stretch of the El Sur Ranch, would be protected from development by a transfer of development credit (TDC) policy in the Big Sur Local Coastal Program. First District Supervisor Michal Moore released a four-page preliminary outline of his proposed TDC policy this week

By ROBERT MISKIMON

FIRST DISTRICT Supervisor Michal Moore released a proposed transfer of development credit (TDC) system for Big Sur this week that raises more questions than it answers.

The long-awaited document — which will be a crucial element in the Big Sur Local Coastal Program — will be set for later hearing by the Board of Supervisors Tuesday, Jan. 26.

However, the admittedly-incomplete TDC policy may not satisfy critics of Supervisors Michal Moore and William Peters of Carmel Valley who have criticised the fact the Big Sur LCP hearings were scheduled in two parts, with the all-important TDC portion not released until Jan. 18.

The "overview of the proposed system" released by Supervisor Moore Monday lists Peter Bass of the State Coastal Conservance as "special consultant" in preparation of the TDC policy.

The four-page document describes the general operation of the transfer of development credit concept and mentions its implementation in the Santa Monica area, but provides precious few details of how it would operate in the 70-mile stretch of the Big Sur coastline.

Moore's TDC proposal suggests allocation of development credits, which can be bought and sold to increase densities in designated "receiver" areas, on a pro-rata basis among all parcels on an acreage basis.

However, the plan does not indicate the location of the proposed "receiver" areas where increased development density could be allowed through purchase by developers from property owners. Most importantly, it does not specify whether those "receiver

Text of Moore's Transfer of Development Credit plan

THE BIG SUR COAST has been the subject of a seven year moratorium on development during the preparation of and the hearings on the Local Coastal Plan. The approximately 40,000 acres within the Planning area will be the subject of a comprehensive land use management plan with, at the outset, very restrictive guidelines and allowances for development. The Transfer of Density Credits Program is designed to enhance the feasibility of such a plan and in the process should provide some mitigation of loss for those property owners whose value or use potential is diminished.

From the start, we have attempted to balance a number of competing objectives. Foremost, naturally, is the need to conform to and implement the Coastal Act of 1976. We take as a given the expressed need for resource protection within the Big Sur and the Coastal Commission policies emphasizing visitor enjoyment and use of that resource. In addition we respect the tenet of private property rights and have attempted to emphasize them where they are not in conflict with the Coastal Act.

The inherent conflict between perceived property rights and the government policy power led us to consider a system that provides a compensation mechanism with clear incentives to implement the County LCP/LUP. Further we intend to do so leaving the choice of action and the money needed to implement the plan within the private sector. Future involvement of Federal and State agencies in Big Sur will be independent of (not a function of) this process, if it occurs at all.

Since it is clear that any even moderately restrictive land use plan will involve diminishment of private property opportunities, this process is especially sensitive to the threat of inverse condemnation. The opportunities to offer public monies under eminent domain proceeding are extremely limited and cannot be counted on nor appear desirable for large scale acquisitions. The only entity left becomes the private sector itself. Thus, the system we propose, while publically regulated, relies entirely in its essense on private involvement and participation. Further, this process is dependent on policies set elsewhere. Density criteria, viewshed policies and other proposed plan policies are taken as given and arise outside the elements of this process.

THE CONCEPT

We use the term Transferable Density Credits, to indicate a compensation device or transferable commodity that results in an equity adjustment for land owners whose ultimate use of property is diminished through government regulation. In its broadest application landowners who are restricted may effectively transfer values or potential to develop either to areas more appropriate for development or where greater densities are encouraged or allowed.

A Transferable Development Right then is a value expressed as development potential capable of being either utilized, saved, transfered (in ownership), sold, donated, or destroyed by the owner. Its value is dependent on several factors, including:

A: Total TDC's created

B: Presence or absence of specific transfer zones

C: Zoning, hazard or other permissive regulations governing sites specific approvals

D: The market

E: Presence or absence of philathropic purchasers (who may influence market by purchase and destruction rather than use of the Credits.)

Several clear planning objectives lead us to the use of TDC's in this document. They include:

A: The desire to achieve an equitable allocation and distribution of units finally approved in the planning area.*

B: The desire to achieve some compensation or equity adjustment for those property owners whose values are diminished through regulation.

C: The desire to have the market stimulate the preferred type of construction activity. (This might include for instance, a special emphasis on agricultural land preservation or diminishment of mining operations.)

D: A desire to either accomplish or encourage remedial allocation or consolidation of existing substandard parcels.

* This may include as a primary focus the tenet that existing parcels are handled through some grandfather clause and only those expected at the margin enter the transfer area.

As an example, a TDC program has been operating in the Santa Monica Mountains for almost two years. Under this program, 60 credits have to date been used retiring approximately 170 substandard lots from development. Of these credits that have been the subject of exchange, all but 4 have been the product of private market transactions, independent of any government involvement of purchase. Prices have fluctuated over time between 20 and 40 thousand dollars per credit. Although the current real estate market is slow, applications have been approved for approximately 130 additional TDC's.

THE SYSTEM IN BRIEF

Any plan to allocate density (such as proposed in the LUP Or under our TDC alternative) should keep in mind the total number of units that could be built under it, including those on parcels previously approved. The LCP planning process has examined in some detail the cumulative constraints operating on development in Big Sur (namely, such items as capacity of Highway 1; water resources; impacts on wilderness, natural resources and cultural values; priority to visitor serving uses, etc.).

The County, the Commission and the local citizens all generally recognize, on the basis of the above mentioned analysis and hearings, that limits must be placed on cumulative future development in Big Sur. The types of numbers being talked about as added developmental potential, above levels already built or possible on existing lots, are extremely limited. The share of added regional development that can be equitably allocated to any reasonable size parcel of land will, in almost all circumstances, fall far below the natural on-site capacity of that parcel taken in isolation. For example, allocating 100 additional residence units amongst the 70,000 acres of private land in Big Sur would amount to 1 unit per 700 acres. Thus, most individual parcels could not all develop to their full on-site potential without overloading the regional capacity.

It becomes necessary them to develop a method of equitable allocation of valuable development potential. Starting in an area with no development it would be reasonable to assume an allocation of the region's total capacity equally among all owners on the basis of the number of acres owned: for each so many acres, one unit is recognized. However, recognition should be given to the historical fact that property owners, through past County acknowledgement of legal parcels, have the expectation that, barring safety and hazard considerations and on-site or proximate resource constraints, they can build a house on their land even though it may be a relatively small parcel.

The system we have devised strikes a balance between these conflicting objectives by first "grandfathering" an allocation of one residence per each existing parcel that is vacant, legal and buildable, and recognizing those overnite visitor units already built. Only those parcel owners with ownerships that are substandard (by virtue of on-site hazards e.g., slides, lack of water, seismic faults, flood plain, or proper access; inadequate septic capacity; no location on parcel where a house can be sited on slopes of under 30 percent, etc.) or by location in an area of extreme resource constraints on road access and water supply (e.g. Garrapata, Bixby, Sycamore Canyon) will receive a reduced or zero density allocation under the "grandfather clause."

The system then allocates the residual balances of residential and visitor serving development capacity pro-rata across all parcels on acreage basis. Additional provisions permit landowners to augment the allocated density of their parcel to the limits set by site specific criteria (for on-site development) through purchase, in an open market, of density allocation granted to other property owners under this plan.

areas would be within or outside of the Big Sur planning area.

Designation of those areas of relatively higher density would inevitably be an integral — and essential — part of the final TDC policy and would have a direct effect upon land use patterns in the LCP planning area.

Moore's proposal "grandfathers" an allocation of one residence per each existing parcel which is vacant, legal and buildable, and it recognizes existing visitor units. Only substandard parcels or those with "extreme resource constraints" would be allocated a reduced or zero density potential.

One effect of the TDC may be to permit expansion of the number of new visitor-serving units in Big Sur from the 500 units mentioned under the general policy section of the LCP to 750 units mentioned under "density intensification."

The revised Big Sur LCP developed by Monterey County in an effort to comply with conditions imposed by the Coastal Commission indicates that a TDC system "shall specify rules that maintain ceiling limits of 750 new visitor serving units and 100 new land divisions."

SUPERVISOR MOORE'S proposed TDC policy does not appear to specify those rules, except in a general way.

"The types of numbers being talked about as added development potential, above levels already built or possible on existing lots, are extremely limited," the TDC proposal indicates.

"The share of regional development that can be equitably allocated to any reasonable size parcel of land will, in almost all circumstances, fall far below the natural on-site capacity of that parcel taken in isolation.

"For example, allocating 100 additional residence unit among the 70,000 acres of private land in Big Sur would amount to one unit per 700 acres. Thus, most individual parcels could not all develop to their full on-site potential without overloading the regional capacity."

The recommended allocation of density credits on available acreage on a pro-rata basis is one of the methods described by Carmel Valley attorney Alexander Henson in a special study of TDCs which he performed for Monterey County in 1980.

That type of allocation — according to Henson's analysis — would ignore actual land values of different parcels and would be less equitable than an allocation system based upon actual assessed value of different parcels.

Moore's TDC proposal indicates that the value of development credits depends upon the total number of TDCs created by the policy, the existence of transfer zones, zoning and other restrictions, market conditions, and the existence of philanthropists who may purchase but not use credits.

Supervisors Peters and Moore were to meet with Big Sur residents yesterday (Jan. 20) at the Big Sur Grange Hall to answer questions about the revised Local Coastal Program, and specifically about the TDC policy.

John Harlan, president of the Coast Property Owners Association of Big Sur, voiced some of those concerns at the Jan. 12 hearing before the Board of Supervisors on the Big Sur plan.

Harlan said his 99-member organization feels "there are too many areas of the LCP that rely on the TDC approach to solve problems related to inverse condemnation of property.

"If there are no alternative solutions, many of the policies of the LCP can only be regarded as confiscatory," Harlan said. Most transfer of development credit programs operate in urban — not rural — areas and there is little precedent for a TDC program in Big Sur, where residential density is one unit per 35 or 40 acres, Harlan said.

"We fear that any TDC approach will run the danger of opening the door to speculative profiteering at the expense and hardship of present property owners who may be put into the position of having property devalued by virtue of down-zoning policies."

Harlan predicted legal challenges to the Big Sur plan and its still-unclear TDC policy:

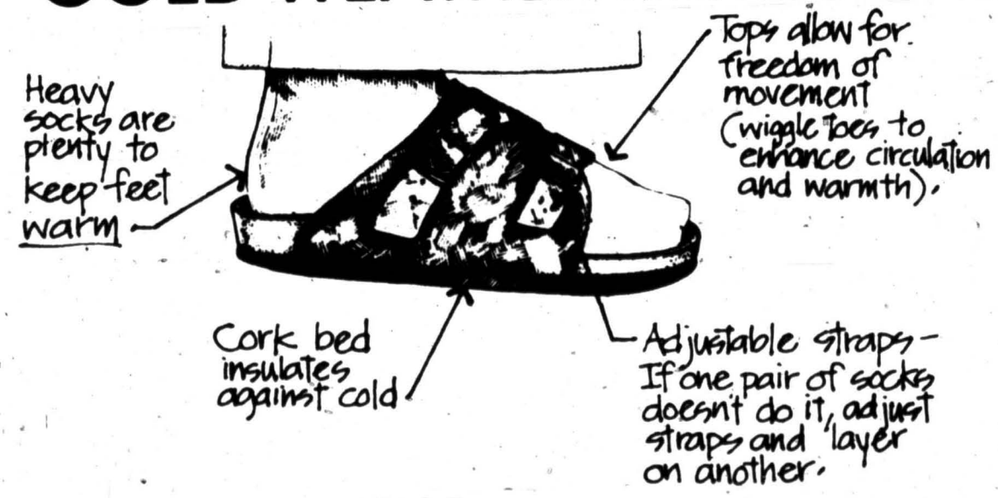

"We now have the distinct impression that our interests, our constitutional rights, our property values, our homes, our wishes, our way of life and our pocketbooks are of little interest to those we pay to protect our interests or those we've honored with the trust of representing us," Harlan told the supervisors.

Sunset Theater rents may be hiked

By MICHAEL GARDNER

IT MAY SOON cost more to rent the auditorium at Sunset Center.

Although a specific proposal has not been developed, the Carmel Cultural Commission will discuss a possible rate increase for rental of the 730-seat theater when it meets Monday, Jan. 25.

"The auditorium rates are probably the lowest on the whole cost. We just want to equate the costs. That does . ot mean we'll be the highest," said Mayor Barney Laiolo, who initially suggested a review of the rental charges.

"The main idea behind this thing is that I think our balance of rents is not equitable to the costs," said Laiolo.

The current rental fee is 10 percent of the gross receipts or $100 per performance and a day-long rehearsal. The only other charge is $7.50 per hour for the stage manager, according to Sunset Center Director Richard Tyler.

Representatives of organizations that regularly use Sunset Theater expressed concern over the proposed rental fee increase.

"I think that the city, through Richard Tyler, has tried to be very fair with the symphony over the years," said Tom Treanor, president of the Monterey County Symphony. "We have the position of running a deficit this year. From that standpoint, we would be sorry to see the rates increase. I think the city has our integrity in mind and that they have always been fair to us in the past.

Carmel Music Society President Robert Scripture said an increase in rent would affect the organization, especially in view of recent state and federal grant cutbacks.

"Of course we regret any increase in our costs," he said. "Of course we understand the center's cost has increased. We would hope that it would be increased the absolute minimum."

Olga Scheffler, treasurer of the Carmel Music Society, said the low rates have attracted more business, which brings in additional revenue for the city. She said an increase in rates may force organizations to look elsewhere for facilities.

"They have a captive audience," she said. "I think the rates are not cheap, but at this point I think they are fair."

Ted Calhoon, president of the Carmel Bach Festival, said the city has provided "fantastic" support for the arts. He said he could not comment on the proposed rent increase until he had additional information on specific dollar amounts.

RENTAL RATES have not increased since 1971 and Sunset Center has never charged extra fees for utilities or special equipment, Tyler said.

"The rate at Sunset Center for the theater is less expensive not only on the Monterey Peninsula, but on the West Coast," he said.

Two of the three area auditoriums surveyed by the Pine Cone/Outlook charged more than the rental fee at Sunset Theater, according to figures supplied by the facilities' business offices.

The basic rental fee for the Steinbeck Auditorium in the Monterey Conference Center is $400 per night; at the 1,200-seat Sherwood Hall in Salinas the fee is $600 a night, or 10 percent of the gross for commercial events and $450 per night for non-profit organizations; and at Santa Catalina School, the 500-seat auditorium rents for $100 per night.

Rental of Sunset Theater is expected to bring in approximately $35,000 from about 150 performances in fiscal year 1981-82, Tyler said.

Organizers of the Explorama series are the most frequent renters of the theater with 27 programs scheduled through mid-1982, according to Tyler. Other major renters include the Monterey County Symphony, the Carmel Bach Festival and The Carmel Music Society.

Carmel area schools use the facility several times a year, but are not charged a rental fee, he said.

Laiolo said he would like to see a review of all rental fees at Sunset Center, but the Cultural Commission agenda indicates that only the auditorium charges are up for discussion Jan. 25.

MAESTRO SANDOR Salgo raises his baton during a rehearsal for the Carmel Bach Festival at Sunset Center Theatre. Rates for rental of the city-owned property may go up soon. The Carmel Cultural Commission will consider the matter when it meets Monday.

Smaller rooms at Sunset Center rent for $20 to $40 per day, depending on the size and the renting organization, Tyler said.

The only other rooms available for rent in the Carmel area are at the public schools. Those are rented for $22 to $45 per two-hour period, depending on the renting organization, according to the Carmel Unified School District Community Services office.

University of California at Santa Cruz and Monterey Peninsula College are the only regular renters of classrooms in Carmel schools, said Isabel Head of the Community Services office.

The City Council must authorize any rent increases proposed by the Cultural Commission.

Before the city revised its rate structure in 1971, it rented the facilities at Sunset Center to certain locally-based musical organizations at reduced rates. These include the Carmel Bach Festival, which now uses Sunset Center for more than two full weeks of performances and rehearsals; the Monterey County Symphony; and the Carmel Music Society and the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society.

To gain recognition from the community that these reduced rates were, in fact, a subsidy from the city to these organizations, it adopted a new policy of charging each of the organizations full price for rental of the theatre and other facilities, but then giving funds every year to these same organizations.

requirements and met the moral community standards, we now find with each governmental body meeting that we are losing ever more of our individual rights," Mrs. Odello said.

"This coastal staff recommendation is yet more restrictive, more confiscatory, and more punitive and has no compassion for justice. I find it totally inconceivable that anyone could assume to perpetrate such dastardly conclusions upon others. This offends my Christian ethics.

"I am angry, hurt, betrayed and I feel deserted that the people in our community can stand by and watch something like this happen."

MRS. ODELLO said development of only 58 units on the eastern side of the ranch would not be economically feasible. She also objected to a proposed condition that would eliminate the area adjacent to Highway 1 as a permitted location for a farmer's market and restaurant.

The revised LCP would permit development of between 517 and 575 new residences — mostly through subdivision — on lands south of the Carmel River. Added to the existing 502 residential units in that area, the proposed LCP would permit a total of between 1,019 and 1,1077 residential units.

The original LCP submitted by Monterey County allowed development of 753 new residential units south of the Carmel River. The revised LCP would permit 120 visitor-serving units plus 30 low-cost visitor units (150) on both the Hudson and Riley ranches south of Carmel.

The plan would permit 23 employee housing units and 18 residences on the Riley property, as well as 23 employee housing units and 24 residences on the Hudson ranch. A proposed conference center to be developed in conjunction with the Hudson-Riley project "must be designated to serve on-site hotel patrons only," according to the revised plan.

The original Coastal Commission recommendation for the Point Lobos Ranch (Hudson-Riley) was for 299 visitor-serving units plus low-cost visitor facilities. The revised plan would specify that intensive visitor facilities must be located only in the flatlands area of the properties.

The Citizens Advisory Committee essentially "reiterated our positions" on most issues at the Jan. 14 meeting, said chairman Harold Seyferth. The committee considered public access, recreation, visual resources, environmentally sensitive habitats, and forestry elements of the plan. The committee was to consider agricultural land — and the Odello proposal — this week.

"On most issues, we went back to our original position," Seyferth said. "We pointed out that we had arrived at them after considerable debate. We found it unthinkable to allow an open public trail and camping in the Malpaso watershed because that's the water source for the Carmel Riviera.

"We feel strongly that Malpaso Beach ought to be a sanctuary and not have public access," he said.

In its cover letter, the Coastal Commission staff said a return to the original positions reflected in the county LCP probably would not be acceptable.

"Complete substitution of the planning commission version for the submitted document, as advocated by some, is not acceptable because the former also contains Coastal Act inconsistencies," Coastal Commission regional director Ed Brown said.

Seyferth said the committee feels "the community who lives here seven days a week knows best" what should be in the final LCP.

Orientation is planned at CMS

An orientation session for parents of students who will enter the fifth grade at Carmel Middle School this fall will be offered Feb. 3 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the Middle School library.

The purpose of the orientation, which is sponsored by the CMS Parent Faculty Club, is to acquaint parents with the program and activities at the school.

CMS Principal Frank Lynch will introduce department heads and counselors. A film about the school will also be shown, followed by a question and answer period.

The next regular meeting of the CMS Parent Faculty Club wil be Feb. 8 at 9 a.m. in the school library. All parents are invited.

Supervisors will review troubled road intersection

MONTEREY County supervisors will review conditions that pertain to the Robinson Canyon Road-Carmel Valley Road intersection at 2:45 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 26 in the county courthouse in Salinas.

The board will receive findings by the planning commission Jan. 13 that the proposed intersection improvement is consistent with the county general plan, the Carmel Valley Master Plan, and the Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan.

Those findings were made on the recommendation of Deputy County Counsel Jose Ramos in anticipation of a Feb. 3 hearing in Superior Court on a lawsuit which challenges the intersection.

Attorneys Alexander Henson and Richard Rosenthal of Carmel Valley, on behalf of Virginia Merz of Carmel, have petitioned for a peremptory writ of mandate to force preparation of an environmental impact report on the intersection project.

One allegation in the lawsuit is that the Board of Supervisors violated the state government code when it failed to have the planning commission make the consistency findings. The last-minute findings by the county are intended to be used as part of the county's defense, Ramos indicated.

"The four causes of action are that an EIR wasn't done, that the intersection project is a de facto amendment to the Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan, that the project didn't receive a consistency review by the planning commission, and that it was not evaluated as a public works project," Ramos said.

County planning commissions are required by law to review county public works projects for consistency with adopted county plans.

"The intersection is not a de facto amendment because it's called for in the Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan, which carries out the Carmel Valley Master Plan."

Ramos said the request for preparation of an EIR was filed after the 30-day appeal period had expired. Supervisors approved intersection plans Aug. 18; Mrs. Merz' appeal was filed Nov. 17.

The project is linked with the completion of further development stages of the 500-unit Carmel Valley Ranch. Landmark Lands Co. — developer of Carmel Valley Ranch — has provided Monterey County with a $3.2 million letter of credit to finance intersection improvements.

An agreement between the developer and the county requires that work on the intersection start immediately following construction of the first 160 units, which Ramos has interpreted to mean not later than June.

"The allegations of non-compliance are premature because the final plans for the Robinson Canyon-Carmel Valley Road intersection have not been made," Ramos said. "This is not an interchange, as the plaintiffs claim.

"This is just one traffic movement being routed under two others. There are six possible traffic movements. It's not that big of a project."

In a related matter, the planning commission has scheduled a public hearing Feb. 10 on a use permit sought by Carmel Valley Ranch to build 11 units of housing on a three-acre parcel, where 33 units originally had been planned.

Sanitary district narrows alternatives for office site

THE CARMEL Sanitary District (CSD) has narrowed its alternatives for a new office building site.

It was the consensus of the CSD board Jan. 18 that a committee made up of directors Paul Beemer and Ken McGinnis should limit its review of alternative sites to three.

The first alternative would be to construct office facilities on CSD property located on the north side of the Carmel River just behind the Mission School playfield.

The facility would cost approximately $307,000, according to a staff report. It would encompass three private offices, secretarial and engineering aide work areas, board meeting room with public seating available, restroom facilities, a lunch and break room, and storage space.

The annual operating expense for utilities and janitorial service was estimated by the staff report at $2,000.

The site would be easily accessible if eminent domain proceedings to acquire a right-of-way are successful, the report said.

The bulk of the cost for the site would be for construction, which was estimated at $210,000. Roadway land costs and construction was estimated at $46,000. The remainder of the cost would be for paved parking, fences, furniture, signs, gates and permits.

A second alternative proposes construction of the new building at the northeast corner of the sewage treatment plant property on the south side of the Carmel River.

The interior size and office space of the facility would be basically the same as proposed in the first alternative and would cost $210,000.

A major consideration in the second alternative is the cost of providing access from Highway 1. The staff report said the current road is dangerous because of poor visibility and narrow lanes. To acquire the necessary right-of-ways and to construct a new road, it would cost the CSD approximately $250,000, according to the report.

Annual costs for utilities and janitorial services was estimated at $2,000.

The third alternative calls for district purchase of 1.3 acres of unimproved land that fronts the north side of Rio Road across from the Riverwood development. Purchase cost was estimated by staff at $100,000 to $150,000.

The facility in alternative three would offer the same office space as in the first two proposals. The estimated capital costs and operating expenses were also estimated to be approximately the same.

Although the directors reached a consensus on the three alternatives, McGinnis indicated after the meeting that the committee would keep all options open while it reviews the site proposals. A recommendation from the committee is expected at the Feb. 18 board meeting.

IN OTHER ACTION, the board was informed that its legal counsel, Don Freeman, has been asked by Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver to write the findings of law in the legal dispute between CSD and the Pebble Beach Sanitary District.

Silver, in a notice of intended decision, had said Pebble Beach must pay one-third the costs of the CSD Water Reclamation Project. After Freeman writes the findings of law, it will be reviewed by the judge and the PBSD attorney before Silver makes a final ruling.

Coaches may quit if graduation credit is given for after-school sports play

By ROBERT MISKIMON

TRUSTEES of the Carmel Unified School District will consider ways to offer high school graduation credit for after-school sports when they meet at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 26 at River School.

The physical education and coaching staffs at Carmel High School are rigidly opposed to the move and coaches have threatened to resign if it is implemented, said athletic director Monty Feekes.

"They will lose 20 or 25 coaches if they do this," Feekes predicted. "There is a very good chance they'd all quit if this happens. They have told me so."

Differences between the staff and the Board of Education emerged during an all-day study session Jan. 8 to review curriculum and high school graduation requirements.

Curriculum director Rich Hawkins informed the board at its Jan. 12 meeting he would present several ways to offer graduation credits for after-school sports at the Jan. 26 meeting.

"The message is the board wants to offer credit for athletics," Hawkins observed after the study session. "Both the phys ed staff and the coaching staff recomended against the practice."

The Board of Education rescinded fees for after-school athletics last August with the intention to offer credit for participation, despite objections at that time by high school staff.

"Phys ed and athletics are two separate entities," Feekes said. "They are governed as two departments with two department heads. Phys ed is funded just by the school district while athletics are funded by the district plus outside sources, such as the Boosters Club and FOCUS (Friends of Carmel Unified School District)."

Feekes said the objections of phys ed teachers and athletic coaches are based on the fact the two programs have different philosophies and objectives, and the fact that non-certificated coaches are paid less than certificated staff who coach after-school sports.

"It's against the law for people involved in coaching after-school sports without teaching credentials to offer credit," Feekes said. "The philosophy of our phys ed program is one of lifetime sports and carry-over skills. Tennis, golf, bicycling, dancing are things people can do all through life.

"The philosophies of phys ed and interscholastic sports are as incompatible as the philosophies of English and math. The department and the coaching staff don't feel we should give credit for after-school athletics because they're not compatible."

FEEKES SAID the staff feels the Board of Education wants to use after-school sports as a way to extend the number of periods in the school day without paying the full price for certificated personnel.

"If athletics becomes another period, then the coaches should get the same pay as teachers," he said. About 75 percent of the after-school sports coaches are certificated teachers and the remainder are non-certificated.

"The board is trying to add another period or two and not pay the full amount," he asserted. "State law says that whenever a student is allowed to give up phys ed he must take another class of equal time. To get credit for after-school athletics, a student would have to take another course."

All coaches in the district — whether certificated teachers or not — are paid at the same rate. If all coaches were paid at the certificated rate, it would cost the district about $3,500 more each year for every coach who instructs three sports, Feekes estimated.

Bob Walthour, a Carmel High School phys ed teacher since 1963, also coaches after-school sports.

"We don't mind coaching at the lower pay as long as we're not giving credit," Walthour said. "When they ask us to give more, they should pay more. I think they hope by doing this they can eventually drop a teacher or two — whether in phys ed or in an elective.

"If they do this, the coach in a way becomes a scab because he's working for less after school than in the classroom. I like it the way it is. The board is trying to get kids to get credits cheaply."

Indeed, then-Trustee Elizabeth Bell noted last August when the board considered credit for athletics: "This is a very cheap way to add another period to the Carmel High School program."

Curriculum director Rich Hawkins said one alternative method to offer graduation credit for athletics would be similar to that employed in the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District.

"The student is signed up for phys ed but released for study hall during the season when he plays," Hawkins said. "If we did that we'd have to add a study hall person. The coach would give the grades but the student would get phys ed credit and be in a study hall."

The other possibility is to offer graduation credit for after-school sports and for phys ed, so that students could acquire extra credits for athletics after they complete their phys ed requirements, Hawkins noted.

"As it is now, teachers are limited to teaching a five-period day," he said. "If athletics becomes the sixth period, we'd need more staff. It could cost considerably more either way. What the board hopes to do is offer the credit for athletics, excuse students from phys ed, and just carry on.

"The board wants to avoid paying all the coaches at the teachers' rate because we couldn't afford the increased costs." Hawkins said costs of the after-school sports program would be increased by 40 percent if the district paid all coaches at the teachers' rate.

Supt. Bill Rand said it is possible for the district to offer graduation credits for sports coached by non-certificated personnel, provided certificated staff reviews the course content and structure.

ONE OF THE primary issues the board must decide is whether to offer phys ed or elective credits for participation in after-school sports, Rand said. Another decision involves establishment of limits on how many credits may be acquired.

The phys ed department at Carmel High School has recommended that, if the board decides to offer credit for athletics, credit be given as elective — instead of phys ed — credit.

Trustee Joan Cathey said she supports graduation credits for competitive sports because "it gives athletics some of the credibility it deserves.

"If we're going to give credit, then those people (coaches) need to be credentialed," she said. "I don't understand the objections of staff to credit for athletics. The board sees a value in athletics, and I'm surprised the staff doesn't see it the same way."

Reverend Cathey said the board wants to give credit for athletics to recognize the effort and learning involved with sports, and to encourage athletes to take other academic courses.

"There's no thought about this being a detriment to anyone," she said. "I wouldn't go for something unless it was to the advantage of everyone."

Trustee Doyle Clayton said he also favors credit for athletics, but said he isn't sure whether non-credentialed coaches ought to be paid at the same rate as credentialed coaches.

"I feel all students should have some exposure to our phys ed program," Clayton said. "There are many upper division students burdened with academic courses who could benefit from this. It would allow students to complete the two and one-half year phys ed requirements with phys ed classes or after-school sports. But there are a lot of problems with it."

Trustee Barbara Sanford said she'd like to have the phys ed requirement increased to three years, at the same time that students are allowed to satisfy a portion of those credits with athletics.

"There are certain things in phys ed we'd like everybody to take," she said. "We ought to limit the number of credits a student could get for athletics."

Mrs. Sanford said she would oppose payment to non-credentialed coaches at the same rate as teachers. Extension of credit for athletics could ease over-crowded phys ed classes, she said.

"The whole thing can be worked out," Mrs. Sanford said. "We eliminated fees for after-school sports because we can't give credit for classes with fees. I've been waiting since September for something to come back to the board. Parents keep asking when their kids can get credit for athletics."

BOARD PRESIDENT Ken White, a coach at Monterey High School, said he favors extension of academic credits for athletics "in a limited way," so long as it does not detract from completion of the basic phys ed courses.

"I'm not in favor of blanket credit," White said. "I'm in favor of kids getting as much of that lifetime skills part of phys ed as they can. We're trying to build the phys ed department up and make it better by this. This was brought to us by a group of parents who want it."

Harold Santee, the newest member of the board, said he is "in favor of the concept" of credit for athletics if it would enable athletes to devote more time to academic subjects.

"Energy-wise and time-wise it would give them a chance to spend more time on

BASKETBALL, always a popular competitive sport at Carmel High School, may provide credits toward graduation if the district decides to extend academic credit — either toward phys ed or electives — as part of its curriculum review.

TRACK is one of the after-school sports for which the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education wants to give academic credit, over the objections of phys ed staff and coaches.

academics," Santee said.

Curriculum director Rich Hawkins said the district offered academic credit for athletics until the mid-1960s, when there was a four-year phys ed graduation requirement. But there are many disadvantages, from the viewpoint of curriculum, with the program, he said.

"Some of the junior teams are coached by non-credentialed people," Hawkins said. "The proposal is to have the credentialed staff working in some kind of indirect, supervisory capacity over the credentialed staff.

"But the credentialed staff feels that would be stretching their liability to cover students they may never even see, and that it would be using their credential improperly to exploit a loophole in the law. I don't think it's appropriate to give regular academic credit for athletics, especially when there are a lot of other extra-curricular activities students put a lot of time into and receive no credit."

The question of credit for athletics is just one curriculum concern which confronts the Board of Education.

English and social studies were also reviewed by the board at the Jan. 8 study session, and trustees heard staff presentations on math, language arts, and music programs at their Jan. 12 meeting.

Board members have expressed a desire to "beef up" basic curriculum offerings with a view to strengthened high school graduation requirements. Students in the graduating classes of 1982, 1983, and 1984 are required to earn 220 units, but that number will be increased to 230 units for the class of 1985.

Five units will be added in both occupational education and electives.

These are current graduation requirements: English, 30 units; social science, 25; math, 10; science, 15; driver education, 5; phys ed, 25; performing and productive arts/career education, 10; electives, 100.

Hawkins said he will prepare an "umbrella" view of curriculum and graduation requirements to show the Board of Education that many elective courses actually are rigorous, academic subjects required for college entrance.

"There is general support for an examination of our total structure," he said. "Just because it looks like we've got a lot of electives it doesn't necessarily mean we're weak in the 'solid' subjects. Some college-bound students have 70 or 80 of their 95 units of electives in 'solid' subjects, like foreign languages, math and geometry.

"We want to orchestrate our approach to how we change the whole structure of our program. We expect to have some increase in required courses."

Swimmers interested in competition invited to Carmel Barracuda tryouts

"If you can swim, you can tryout. We give everybody a chance."

That is the philosophy behind the Carmel Barracudas Swim Club and its second-year coach, Phil Di Girolamo.

Carmel area residents interested in competitive swimming are invited to try out for the club during practice sessions held Monday through Friday from 5 to 6:30 p.m. at the Carmel High School pool, Di Girolamo said.

"We want people interested in swimming. Of course, we don't want anybody who takes an hour to swim a lap, but if you want to be involved in competitive swimming, you can try out," he said.

The Barracudas defray expenses through monthly dues, which were $10 per member last season. Dues may increase this year, Di Girolamo said.

Twelve swimmers have joined the club this year and the coach said he expects more as the season progresses. There were 46 members last year.

In February, the Barracudas will join the Pacific Swimming League, which is mid-way through its tournament season.

The league sponsors different tournaments for swimmers of different ability levels. During the season, Class A swimmers go to one tournament while Class C swimmers participate in a separate meet, Di Girolamo explained.

The Barracudas will join the coast Valley Aquatic League in the spring. The club plans to host its first meet in late May or June. The league schedule has not been completed yet, he said.

More than 100 teams from Monterey County to San Jose participate in the dual meet league season. Transportation will be provided through private car pools, Di Girolamo said.

The coach added that he would begin a Masters Class level of training and competition for adults, but he needs 15 participants. Swimmers interested in a Masters Class program can stop by the pool during practice.

CARMEL BARRACUDAS coach Phil Di Girolamo invites all swimmers to join. Interested Carmel area residents can try out for the Barracudas Monday through Friday from 5 to 6:30 p.m. at the Carmel High School pool. (Michael Gardner photos)

TWO TOP BARRACUDAS will return for another season: Mark Reardon and Emily Banks. Miss Banks attends Carmel High School and was voted the Padres' most improved swimmer last season. She swims with the Barracudas "because it's fun and I enjoy the competition." Reardon, also a CHS student, was the Barracudas' most improved swimmer in the boys 15-18 division last season. He swims on the CHS team and also played water polo at CHS last year. He swims with the Barracudas "because it's convenient and I like the people."

Business Beat

Business 'mecca' in Carmel Valley?

By FLORENCE MASON

"The business center of Carmel is moving in this direction; it will be the mecca of the business world right here."

The speaker is Herma Smith Curtis. The occasion is her company's move from its 10-year location on Junipero to "gorgeous" new quarters on Clock Tower Place, across from the new Carmel post office.

Why does she believe the business center of Carmel is moving out of the city itself? "Because of the new small shops, the high rents, and the lack of parking in town," she said.

Mrs. Curtis also talked about the new needs of a large real estate company. "I feel that real estate is never going to be the same again. We outgrew the small offices; this was a move that had to be made." She said she bought the lot a long time ago for this purpose, and planned all the space for today's needs: corporate headquarters, administrative space, a conference room, room for each of the agents ("who were falling over each other in the Carmel office"), a computer room, lunch room, large reception area . . . "It adds up to better control," Mrs. Curtis said, "we can oversee it all so much better, and that's what it takes today."

"If I do say so myself, it's beautiful," she said. And with the next breath came some of her feelings about the hassle of moving: "A move is a move — we're standing on our heads at the moment! But you have to do what you have to do." She admitted: "It tugged at my heart to leave the Junipero Street location after 10 years." But there was no "tug" about leaving the city of Carmel's parking problems for 48 spaces under her new building, plus 22 more allocated, and the general parking available in the Carmel Rancho area.

What about the future for her business? "I'm an optimist," Mrs. Curtis said, "that's my nature. I really feel that American people need homes. There hasn't been a lot of construction lately, so people have stayed in their homes and the market has been depressed. But it has to turn around: the American dream is still a dream, not a nightmare."

Mrs. Curtis said, with great vigor, that she can see a different outlook just in the business that has come to the company in the first few days of the new year. "I can feel the optimism out there!"

ONE PERSON who does not agree with Mrs. Curtis' opinion about the business center of Carmel is Peterson Conway. After a three-year search for a suitable Carmel location for Conway of Asia — his Oriental rug and antique business — Conway is delighted to be the new tenant of the historic building at Dolores and Seventh recently vacated by Dolores Pharmacy.

That's good news for those people who had expressed the hope that the beauty of the building and especially the fine cabinets inside would be retained. Conway told the Business License and Code Review Board that he plans only to enhance the building by retexturing the exterior and restoring the terra cotta floors inside.

Later, he told me that the building is ideal for his purposes because of its basic beauty and that the cabinetry would cost at least $100,000 to re-create. He will refinish the cabinets and use them for the statuary and antique bronzes that are supplemental to his main business, Oriental rugs.

Conway will continue to operate his business at Valley Hills, which is primarily concerned with the sale of rugs wholesale throughout the world. He said his long search for a Carmel location was made more difficult by "unaffordable rents, suitable only for fast food outlets or T-shirt stores" but he finally "found a fair landlord and negotiated a good lease."

HERMA SMITH-CURTIS has moved her real estate company into its new quarters on Clock Tower Place across from the new Carmel Post Office. Curtis owns the building and rents out office space to several different companies.

INSIDE HER private office, Mrs. Curtis has room for a conference area. Clockwise are: Jim Heath, property management manager; Tom Reddy, Carmel office manager; Mrs. Curtis; Becky Smith, administrative office manager; and Robert Russell, Monterey office manager.

Conway is no stranger to Carmel. He has lived here all of his life. He had one recollection about City Hall (meeting place of the BLCRB): "It was right here, when I was 15, that (police Capt.) Bob Fischer gave me my Eagle Scout badge!" Another memory for the building that will now be the home for his business: "It will be as it was when I was a busboy at the French cafe in 1956."

Conway is well aware that any changes he might make will have to be approved by both the City Council and the planning commission inasmuch as the building is on the city's official list of historical buildings. He may install awnings to match the one over the entrance to La Boheme, next door.

UNDERGROUND PARKING is one of the features at the new home of Herma Smith Curtis Better Homes and Gardens Real Estate.

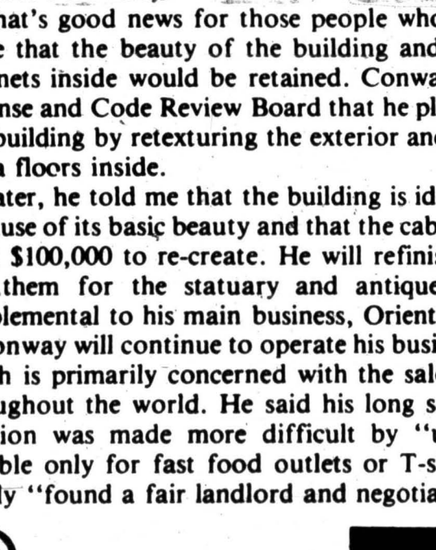

While the sale of Oriental rugs has been his primary business in Carmel Valley Village and Valley Hills for 13 years, Conway has sold jewelry — antique pieces and collectors' items — to such art museums as the Smithsonian and the de Young.

With obvious conviction, Conway explained his choice of a city of Carmel location: "It is true Carmel has lost some of its charm, but it is still beautiful. We have to be pioneer enough and believe in it enough to make it more like what it was. Yes, there are parking problems and there is less personal appeal in some areas, but it is still very special."

THE CARMEL INN: NOW A WILLIAMS FAMILY ENTERPRISE

A man who used to be "everyone's grandchild" is the new owner of the Carmel Inn, Carmel's adult residential care facility.

Myles Williams and his wife, Rhonda, took over the facility on San Carlos, south of Eighth, with the close of escrow Jan. 1. Contrary to rumors, of which Williams said he is aware, the inn will not be just an investment, even though his business activity has often been "putting businesses together and selling them."

Williams' background is varied. For many years he was a professional entertainer, singing all over the world with the New Christy Minstrels. The motion picture business claimed him for a time, too. Just a few years ago, as owner of the Carmel Motoring Co., he also operated antique buses for local tours.

It is Williams' present Carmel business, Pacific Land and Investment Co., that he describes as "the most important thing we do." The "we" being Williams and his wife, who is a real estate Broker.

Having many elderly relatives and being involved with older people most of his life, Williams welcomed the opportunity to put some of his ideas about their interests and needs into practice. Of real importance: his mother, Dr. Camille Templeton, was ideally suited to manage the facility for him. She is coming out of her second — or is it third? — "retirement" to be managing director of the inn.

"It fills the void in my life at this particular time," said enthusiastic, energetic Dr. Templeton. She has lived in Carmel since 1938, but has been in and out of the area as an HEW worker and while affiliated with several universities (including U.C. Berkeley). She is a professional social worker and psychologist with special interest in rehabilitation.

"I came here to retire — for good — in 1971," Dr. Templeton said, "and then I found there was a need for my services in psychological research in various universities. Later, I retired again. Now I'm very excited about this!"

As managing director, Dr. Templeton will be carrying out many of her son's and her own ideas about geriatrics, preventive medicine and health. They have worked together before, with Williams in a volunteer capacity. Now they have an opportunity to put their ideas about diet, vitamins and the need for recreation ("for the mind as well as for the body," Williams said) into practice. And a fine facility in which to do it.

THE CROSSROADS: MANAGEMENT AND MARKETING

Two key positions with The Crossroads have now been filled as development at the new shopping center moves ahead.

Jan Michelsen is fully involved in that development as shopping center manager. In a rather limited vocational field, she comes with an impressive amount of specific experience.

Ms. Michelsen worked with Pete and Jack Anderson, co-owners (with Bud Clark) of The Crossroads, when the brothers were in similar activities as Commercial Real Estate Service in San Francisco. She ran the gamut of responsibilities there: secretary, office manager, assistant. Then for two years she was the assistant site acquisition manager for Sutter Hill, a shopping center in Seattle.

Prepared by the Andersons for just such a job, and eager to return to California, Ms. Michelsen jumped at the opportunity to become manager of The Crossroads.

What does she do? "Everything!" The first thing she thought to mention was "keeping good rapport with the tenants." She also collects their rents, handles their problems, supervises maintenance, security and landscaping. "I'm also the complaint department!" she added.

The company, Carmel Valley Partners, found an apartment in Monterey for Ms. Michelsen before she came down from Seattle. In her spare time she skis, plays tennis and "reads a lot." In her working hours: "I'm doing what I really wanted to do."

Debbie Bradburn's slight English accent reveals her background; she has been on the Peninsula just ten years. For six years, she was public relations director for the Monterey County SPCA, after serving as a member of the society's board of directors. For the last year she has been administrative assistant to James Alinder, executive director of the Friends of Photography here in Carmel. Her years on the Peninsula have also been marked by volunteer work for several organizations. In 1975 she was named Volunteer of the Year by the Bach Festival.

The job change, which took effect just a week ago, came about because she wanted to get back into public relations, and also "because I am excited about The Crossroads; I couldn't turn it down!"

As marketing and promotion director for the new shopping center, she will be "keeping The Crossroads in a good public light, attaining and maintaining a good public image." That will bring her into contact with the media, the public, chambers of commerce and others. "It's a matter of quality, and conveying that sense of quality," she said, "to tourists and residents both. But not necessarily in that order!"

Ms. Bradbury lives in Carmel Valley. Her "outside" interests include her animals, music and free lance writing. Two of those interests come together, for much of her writing is on animal-related issues, including the SPCA magazine.

These two attractive, intelligent women will be working out of their offices — tucked away opposite the Wells Fargo bank, upstairs.

While we were talking, the electronic carillons in the clock tower of The Crossroads rang out. It was the half hour. The chimes also ring on the hour, and there is music at noon and again at 5 p.m. Ms. Michelsen told me that they have been testing local reaction to the chimes and music. The tests show that most people find them delightful. Because of one complaint — from a man who lives at some distance from the shopping center — the volume was lowered somewhat.

Other news from The Crossroads: The Monterey Baking Co.'s latest branch opened last Friday — the second tenant to get under way. The first was the Baobab Collection. The third will be Billy Quon's restaurant (A Great Place for Great Ribs). This weekend owner Bill Lee is busy with employee orientation in preparation for the opening, which he hopes will be toward the end of next week. Another new tenant, hoping to open in a couple of weeks, is The Vitamin Center, a branch of a Los Gatos store owned by Gary Huffine and Randy Inman.

THE OLD AND THE NEW

Preserving the value that is there and adding to it. That is the philosophy of Alan Williams and his partner, Jodie Le Towt, with their plans for the southwest corner of Dolores and Seventh.

ALW Associates is hoping to complete their commercial buildings at that location this spring. Work is well under way, with an unusual permit granted by the building department — just to build the foundation shoring up the one building left there after the Arco gas station closed. "The old building is a value that's there," Williams said, "it doesn't make sense to take it down."

With an additional two-story building and another one-story, all around a courtyard, the site will offer 4,500 sq. ft. for commercial uses in ground floor units and 1,500 sq. ft. for offices on the second floor. There will be parking for five or six cars below the buildings.

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

Many people say that January is a slow month, but certainly not for Kim Novak Malloy who is up and at 'em bright and early every morning — including teaching her aerobic exercise class at the Carmel Boy Scout House, Monday through Friday at 9 a.m.

Kim was approached for an interview to be shown on Entertainment Tonight, a television show which airs each evening, seven days a week. Kim agreed on the condition that her exercise class be included. Plans are set for taping to take place at the Sunset Center gym at 9:30 a.m., Jan. 27.

By the way, Kim's exercise class soon wil move to the Sunset Center gym. If you are interested in getting the body back in shape, check with Maggie Eastwood's Transitions Health Studio in Monterey.

NEW OFFICERS OF MPVS

The Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services is growing — growing — growing — and doing good deeds. Last year, the non-profit organization, which primarily operates a thrift shop at 755 Broadway, Seaside, donated more than $45,000 to local organizations.

The MPVC recently installed new officers. They are: Frances McLean of Carmel, president; Josephine Owen of Pacific Grove, first vice-president; Kathryn Taylor of Monterey, second vice-president; Elizabeth Christianson of Carmel, recording secretary; Jean Proto of Carmel, corresponding secretary; Edan Denholm of Monterey, treasurer and Roberta Spiegl of Carmel, parliamentarian.

IT'S A GIRL FOR MALCOLM AND JODI

Jodi Moran was determined to present her husband Malcolm, with a baby girl — and on Dec. 27 she did just that. Little Mandy Shannon made her debut at Community Hospital at 7:07 a.m. She weighed 7 pounds, 12 ounces and was 19 inches long. Her mom says she has very large, dark blue eyes and light colored hair. "It's so light that it might turn out silver like her dad's," laughed the new mom.

Jodi's many friends were also celebrating Mandy's birth. All were part of the "positive thinking" campaign for the baby to be a girl. They hosted Jodi to numerous baby showers where all gifts and decorations were always pink.

Mandy's dad is a famous sculptor and enjoys traveling to get new ideas for his new work. During the three months before Mandy's birth, he stuck close to home so as not to miss the big event. When the baby is a bit older, he plans to take the family on a trip to Vancouver, Canada, where he plans to buy a ranch so that Mandy will have plenty of "growing room." Then, the Morans will travel to Florida where they also plan to purchase a home.

Malcolm's daughter, Callie, is delighted with the new baby as is his daughter, Kathy Moore of Naples, Fla. Kathy and her husband, Dick, (Naples' assistant district attorney) were here for the holidays, so naturally they were in on the big event. Malcolm's son, Bob, who lives in Detroit, Michigan, wasn't able to visit during the holidays, but is looking forward to a visit in the near future.

KATHARINE ENGLAND OFF TO BOSTON COLLEGE

After completing her second year at San Diego University, Katharine England decided to skip a semester in favor of touring Europe. She spent time in England, Switzerland, France and Italy. As a liberal arts major, she especially enjoyed the art in Florence.

After Katharine returned home, she spent time with her dad, Dr. Gene England, before heading to Boston College where she is a junior. Twenty-one year-old Katharine's dual major includes psychology and liberal arts, so it appears she's going to have a busy semester.

Other news from the England family: Gene's mom, Dr. Theora England Willcox and her husband, Orville, were in Carmel for the Christmas holidays and spent a month visiting and sight-seeing.

CHUCK AND WENDY LAZER PLAN ANNUAL CROSBY GALA

Chuck and Wendy Lazer never seem to run out of energy. After a hectic and busy year at their Prestige Properties offices, the couple decided to chuck it all and search for the sun. What better excuse than to spend a week in Hawaii to check out their recently-purchased apartment at the Colony Surf at Diamond Head.

The couple returned home last Monday and just as I, you'll be terribly jealous when you see the gorgeous tans they collected while we hunted for the old thermals and put more wood on the fire.

Next on the agenda for Chuck and Wendy is their big annual Crosby gala which will offer a fun evening and delicious yummies for approximately 75 of their friends. Then, it will be off to the green to watch the stars and the pros hit the little white ball that has given many a fair lady the title of "golf widow"!

DINNER PARTY FOR SINGLES ONLY

People who need people . . .

Single people enjoy meeting other single people, but it isn't always easy to make that happen. One group which has certainly made it a bit easier is the Singles Group from the Carmel Presbyterian Church.

The group which started last summer gets together for socializing and special events at least once every five weeks. These events have included beach parties, Christmas caroling and group meetings with guest speakers.

The most recent event, a dinner party with the men doing the cooking and the women cleaning up the mess, was held at the home of Dr. Gene England last Friday evening. Gene still has his outdoor Christmas lights up, so along with that and the roaring fire in the fireplace, plus good smells coming from the kitchen, the evening got underway with a festive atmosphere.

Making sure that the shrimp jambalaya, rice, cheese fondue and spinach salad were prepared to perfection was "head chef" Butch Faber, who was ably helped by Kathy Nunemaker and David Hastings. Elvira Canner prepared the fantastic dessert of cherries jubilee.

The pool table in the living area provided entertainment and those who wanted to enjoy Gene's hot tub were invited to do so.

Some of those getting acquainted at the get-together were Phyllis Corstorphine, Colonel Vaughn Doner (yep, his real name), Mary Jane Moore, Dan Stein, Linda O'Conner, Anne Bagley, Boyd Porch, Charlotte Kreider, Peg Mitchell, Linda Blackwell, Joan Olson, Barbara Hick, Janet Shaver, Gus Verdult, Astrid Gallet, Lee Hill and his daughter Bonnie, who is visiting from San Francisco, Stephnie Lee, Ginger Cheema and Joan Knutson.

There were approximately 50 people of all ages who participated in the event and many of them will be attending a one-day retreat to Asilomar on Jan. 23. Dr. Harold England, pastor of the Carmel Presbyterian Church will head the retreat.

The success of this group just might give other local single people some good ideas — find out who and where the single people are, and give them the opportunity to meet one another.

new arrivals

Celeste Noelle Mink

Some things come as big surprises and the birth of Celeste Noelle Mink was no exception. The little miss decided to get everyone in an uproar by arriving five weeks early.

Celeste is the daughter of Ron and Myrna Mink of Carmel Valley. She has one brother, Matthew Alexander, 4.

Celeste was born at Community Hospital, Dec. 26 at 2:13 a.m. She weighed 6 pounds, 1 ounce and was 19 inches long, She has brown hair and dark eyes.

Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Leon D. Mink of Lakeview, Arkansas and Mrs. Alexander J. Sebastian of Youngstown, Ohio.

Celeste's dad, an investment banker in Carmel Valley, was present for her birth but declined the doctor's offer to cut the umbilical cord. "He just grimaced through the whole thing," laughed the new mom.

Celeste was born in the wee hours of the morning, so it's not surprising that she likes to party all night. Her bleary-eyed parents will be delighted when she decides that sleeping through the night is the normal thing to do.

Welcome Celeste!

Nicole Terese Rohan

The Carmel Valley home of Michael and Nancy Rohan may be a bit noisy these days, but it is a very happy sound to the couple who recently welcomed a baby daughter, Nicole Terese.

Nicole had quite a welcoming committee waiting for her — her sister Emily, 3, and step sisters, Amy, 12 and Kerry, 13. All the girls love the new baby and pitch in to help with the chores.

Nicole was born at Community Hospital, Nov. 17 at 9:25 a.m. She weighed 7 pounds, 3 ounces and was 19½ inches long. She has big blue yes, but her mom says she's a bit bald so she's not sure what color Nicole's hair will be.

The baby's grandparents are Jack and Marge Swartz of Pittsburgh, Penn. Grandma Marge was here for Nicole's birth and visited for 5 weeks so she could spoil the baby and help with the chores of a big family.

Dad, who owns a Texaco station in Carmel Valley Village, was allowed to be present at Nicole's birth even though she arrived via cesarean section. While mom was in the recovery room, dad was allowed to take Nicole into the nursery and spend hours rocking her.

Along with her sisters, Nicole will not lack for playmates as the family pets include dogs, cats, a goat and three horses. The older girls ride in horse shows. As soon as Nicole can walk she'll probably receive her first pony.

Welcome Nicole!

Aaron Lloyd-Gregory Campbell

When it comes to being the center of attention little Aaron Lloyd-Gregory Campbell is a real pro — he was the only baby born at Community Hospital on Christmas Day.

Aaron, the son of Russell and Kimberley Campbell of Carmel, made his debut at 3:56 a.m. He weighed 7 pounds, 2 ounces, was 19 inches long. He has jet black hair and big blue eyes.

Two-year-old Nicholas Campbell thinks Aaron is a special gift from Santa Claus and enjoys planting kisses on his new little brother.

Aaron's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd B. Campbell of Carmel, owners of Campbell Construction Co., George T. Gregory of Plymouth and Mrs. Deirdre S. Reade of Pebble Beach.

Aaron's dad was born and raised in Carmel. He keeps busy at the construction company of which he is part owner, but is a big help with Nicholas and Aaron. The new baby was born via cesarean section, so while mom was in recovery, dad cuddled Aaron and also did a bit of picture taking.

Not yet ready to sleep the night through, Aaron gets his mom up every two and one-half hours. "I really don't mind," said Mrs. Campbell. "I enjoy having Aaron all to myself during those wee morning hours."

Welcome to the world Aaron — and a belated Merry Christmas!

Kristin Michelle Guy

And Kristin makes three — daughters, that is!

Michael and Brenda Guy of Pebble Beach are the proud parents of another baby daughter, Kristin Michelle. The new arrival joins two sister, Jennifer, 5, and Sarah, 2. Jennifer is enjoying playing "mother," but Sarah is still a bit curious about why the new baby has come to live with her.

Kristin was born at Community Hospital on Dec. 28 at 5:50 a.m. She weighed 6 pounds, 3 ounces and was 18 inches long. She has brown hair and dark eyes.

Her paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Guy of Topeka, Kan. Her maternal grandmother is Mrs. Eva Dold of Emporia, Kan. She was here for the birth and spent three weeks helping to care for the new baby. She is also a great cook, which was very much appreciated by the Guy family.

Kristin's dad, an attorney in Monterey, has had plenty of experience in the diaper department and doesn't mind getting up at night to keep Kristin company. Her mom, a former teacher, says she has her hands full being mother to three lively daughters.

Although the Guys say that Kristin will be their last child, they are especially grateful for their family as they were married 10 years before their first baby arrived.

Welcome to the world, Kristin Michelle!

Ashleigh Chadwick Poland

It's a girl!

Keeping things lively at the Carmel Valley home of Leigh and Mary Poland is little Miss Ashleigh Chadwick who arrived at Community Hospital at 10:45 a.m., Dec. 22. She weighed 7 pounds, 2 ounces and was 19 inches long.

Welcoming Ashleigh into the family is her two-year-old brother, Austin, who can't understand why she cannot talk and doesn't have teeth.

Ashleigh's grandparents are Robert Poland of Columbia, Md.; Mary Lou Coghill of Richmond, Va., and Elizabeth Brown of Bangor, Mich.

Grandma Elizabeth was here for Ashleigh's birth but could only stay two weeks. She plans to return in July.

Ashleigh was born via natural childbirth, so her dad, a stockbroker for Shearson-American Express in Carmel, was present but her doctor wasn't. Seems that Ashleigh just could not wait to arrive, so she was delivered by some very wonderful and capable nurses.

Ashleigh's mom has her hands full, but says that the new father is an active participant and helps with the new baby as well as spending extra time with Austin.

Welcome Ashleigh!

HENRY AVILA

By T.J. CAIN

Henry Avila was a very dedicated teacher who spent a lot of his time and effort with the Padre Band and the Carmel Key Club. Mr. Avila was very generous to all of his students and colleagues.

We feel sad that his untimely death came before we had a chance to show him how much his efforts were appreciated for the many hours he spent with all of us helping us to develop our musical talents.

Mr. Avila was a well-loved man by all of us at Carmel High School and he will be missed by staff and students for a very long time. We share our sorrow with Henry Avila's family and friends.

Sports Roundup

By KAREN EDMONDS

GIRLS' BASKETBALL: The Carmel Girls' Basketball team lost their first game in league play to Pacific Grove 51-45. Four-year returning senior Aileen Kelly keyed the offense with 19 pts. The game could have gone either way in the last couple of minutes.

The Padre team, coached by Chad Lincoln, has a 5-6 record overall and a 0-1 record in league. Tara Spiezer, a returning junior, is one of Carmel's outstanding guards; she consistantly scores double figures and plays aggressive defense. Jymi Friday and Mary Colvin are the top rebounders for Carmel.

The Girls' Junior Varsity Basketball team, coached by Jack Ellena, begins their league play with a victory over Pacific Grove. Jennifer Hinton scored 20 pts. for the team for a 42-25 kill. Ginger Westcott, who is the team captain, played intense defense, and lead the offense.

Both teams will travel to Hollister Thursday, January 14. Each team has the skill, ability, and depth to take first place in their league. Although the Varsity team beat Hollister in the Alisal Tournament in pre league play, the game will be a close one.

SOCCER TEAM: The CHS soccer team kicked off the new year with a 3-3 record in league and 3-4 record overall. The team is coached by Dick Zury, and captained by John Rudolph and Eric Allen. Carlos Zarate, a starting Sophomore, is an outstanding player. He plays with intensity, and scored both goals when CHS defeated King City 2-0 on Friday, January 8.

In the JV division, Carmel is 4-1 in league and 5-1 overall. The team is coached by Dale Young, who graduated from CHS. The team has two very fine leading players in Hoff Brooks, and Jeff Knepp.

In the King City game, Carmel won 3-1. Goals were scored by Bedo Agacayan, Anthony Giammanco, and Steve Paek. On Thursday, Jan. 14, and Saturday, Jan. 16, CHS hosted a Varsity tournament for teams around the Peninsula. CHS varsity team beat Gonzales, the number one team in the league, 2-1. Carlos Zarate scored both goals for the Padres.

THE BOYS' VARSITY BASKETBALL TEAM defeated Palma on Tuesday the 12th in our exciting victory in the third game in league play. In the last two minutes of the game, the score being tied 38-38, Palma wound down the clock for one final shot. The shot attempt was blocked by Padre Brad Wiesner, outleted by Ken Hall, and passed to John Parsons. Parsons was fouled on the shot and went to the freethrow line with 4 seconds left to play. Parsons made both freethrows, to win the game 40-38.

"Our defense and rebounding won the game" said Padre Brad Wiesner and Steve Giraudo, both of whom are starting players and are key rebounding players. Ken Hall played a good defensive game. Ken Hall and Brad Langley are the captains for the Padres. The team is coached by Bob Swartz.

The team is now 1-2 in league and 4-8 overall.

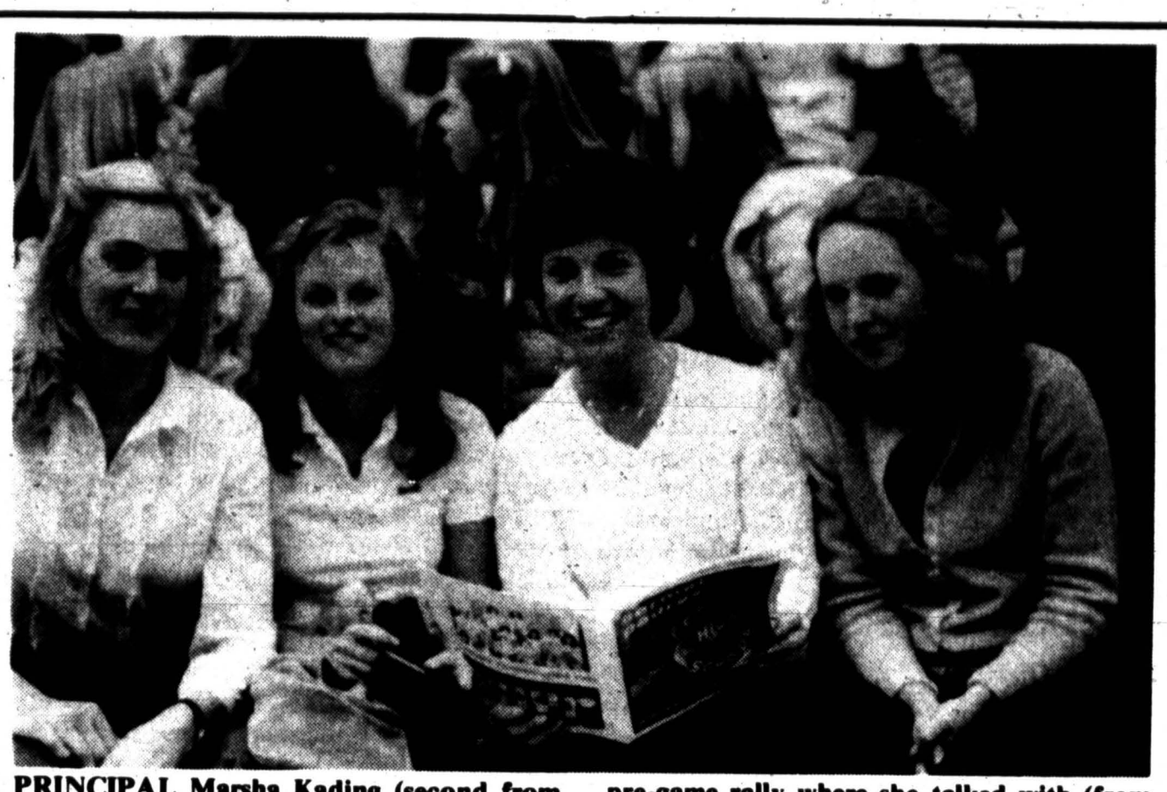

THE BOYS' JUNIOR VARSITY BASKETBALL TEAM lost to Palma 64-50. Carmel is coached by Steve Taylor. The team was led in points by Javen Bernstein and Brady Arrilliaga with 13 points apiece. Both Bernstein and Arrilliaga were aggressive on the boards. Mike Kelly led the team's offense as point guard. The team is now 2-1 in league, and 5-8 overall.

THE FRESHMAN BASKETBALL TEAM, coached by Pat Viray, lost to Palma 34-10. Jim Cooper with the Padres' high scorer with 4 pts. "We had the shots, but the ball just didn't fall in for us," commented the Carmel coach.

THE BOYS' WRESTLING TEAM has a strong team this year. The coaches are Bob Brooks and Bob Walthour. The team is now 1-0 in league. Some of the returning wrestlers are Ward Crane, who competed in the Central Coast Section playoff last year, Jackie Ingram, Carmelo Panetta, and Fred Lind.

Bob Walthour recently took third place in the Varsity Alisal Tournament. Jamie Olsen placed third and Mike White placed fourth in the J.V. Monterey Tournament. Both teams went to Soquel for a league match Jan 14. The Padres also wrestled Jan. 16.

THE CARMEL VARSITY FIELD HOCKEY TEAM is coached by Vicki Schutzler. The team has a disadvantage because only four of the players have ever competed in field hockey before; they are Brenda Lamica, Donna Womble, Trisha Spicher and Troy Russo. The team played against N. Salinas on Thurs. Jan. 14 at home.

CVHS Speaks Out

"Carmel Valley Speaks Out" will be a monthly feature of the Carmel Highlights, written by students from Carmel Valley High School, an alternative school on Schulte Road.

Our contributions will vary from month to month, including such items as editorial commentary, creative writing, and interviews with members of the community. We see this column as a good opportunity to express ourselves and a great way for you to know us better. This month, senior George Cree has interviewed a local graduate on one of America's favorite new pastimes, the video game.

Confessions of a Video Game Addict

By GEORGE CREE
Carmel Valley H.S.

Throughout recent history certain inventions and technological developments gave birth to new hobbies, "crazes," and fads, one of which is video games. The video game craze hit arcades and pizza parlors across the nation two or three years ago and seems to be growing in popularity and acceptance.

The following is an interview with Ron Bactod, 18, of Carmel. Ron is an apparent video game fanatic who has set numerous high-score records on many video games on the Peninsula.

Q: When did you first find yourself interested in video games?

A: Well, it was during a point in my life when I was kinda disillusioned about doing sports. I didn't fit in because I was never good at any sports. I was always more creatively and artistically inclined than physically inclined.

Q: Which game were you most 'into' at that time?

A: I first started playing PONG a lot at a place near where I worked.

Q: When did you notice your hobby turning into an addiction?

A. Oh, one night when I put a quarter in SPACE INVADERS and played from about six o'clock p.m. 'till about three in the morning. And they stayed open just to see me break the machine's present record.

Q: Would you encourage others to indulge in video games?

A: Definitely! Most likely anyone can play them but some people are uncoordinated: they sort of shake and drool as they play.

Q: Where on the Monterey Peninsula can one play video games?

A: I would recommend Weird Harold's in downtown Monterey (Munras Ave.), E.L.A. in New Monterey (Lighthouse Ave.), and the E.L.A. at Northridge Shopping Center.

Q: How do you feel when you are playing video games?

A: It's a great feeling when the human mind can beat a programmed computer. There's always a solution to every problem.

Q: Do you hold any records on any video games?

A: Yea, I hold a record at Weird Harold's on their STARGATE machine. The record is 478,000.

Q: What do you see as the future role of video games in America?

A: Well, computers are going to be used on a larger scale, and, I think video games are one way in which we can prepare ourselves for a computer age.

Expecting an exciting second half

By MARSHA KADING
Principal, Carmel H.S.

The Carmel High School Padres are anticipating an exciting second half. The spirit of our students has carried us through many happy occasions, and a few sad ones as well. We shared our grief at the untimely passing of Henry Avila. The spiritual support expressed by students and the community to Lloyd Baskerville when fire destroyed our pottery building reminded us of how sensitive and caring our young people are.

We shared the joy with our Academic Decathlon and our athletic teams as they garnered honors and brought home trophies.

We look forward to increased participation by parents and community members as we present theatre and dance programs in the near future. The Associated Student Body officers are continuing their fantastic efforts to include all students in at least one activity.

The rapport established between the faculty and students, under the leadership of Aileen Kelly, student body president, has made this year one of the best and happiest in Carmel High School history.

I am so proud to be a part of the educational community here, and I commend the many people who contribute to our mutual success.

'Positive' semester for CHS

By LINDA KAGAN and AILEEN KELLY

The 1981 fall semester at Carmel High had a positive and productive atmosphere in spite of ups and downs. Principal Marsha Kading and Assistant Principal Joe Feldeisen greatly contributed to the prevailing positive outlook.

The two are supportive of all students and faculty members. They share a deep concern for the interests and opinions of others and make themselves available whenever needed. Their efforts are greatly appreciated by all.

In addition, Carmel High has a unique faculty. They have shown considerable interest towards individual students in and out of the classroom. Faculty participation in student activities such as rallies, spirit days, and athletic events has further added to a positive school atmosphere.

Finally, Carmel High has a terrific student council working hard to unite the student body and include all students in school activities. They are looking forward to organizing many fun events in the upcoming Spring semester to continue the present trend.

CHS students are proud and happy to share the events, students', administrators' and teachers' activities to local residents through this student oriented page every third Thursday of the month for the remainder of the school year.

In addition to sports, student council notes, and messages from administrators and teachers, upcoming issues will include writing from students in different classes, clubs, and athletic teams . . . next month student writing will honor Valentine's Day by focusing on "messages from the heart."

All material on this page prepared by the students of Carmel High School

SPIRITS are high this year among Padre seniors, as evidenced by this senior rally before the last home basketball game.

City ponders suit against county for CV moratorium 'violations'

By ROBERT MISKIMON

HAS THE Board of Supervisors violated the Carmel Valley discretionary building moratorium by permitting development at the mouth of the Valley?

Carmel City Atty. George Brehmer was unanimously directed to research that question and report to the council Feb. 2 whether litigation should be pressed against the county.

The City Council reacted Tuesday to allegations by former mayor Gunnar Norberg that the county had violated the Carmel Valley development moratorium by allowing construction in the floodplain at the mouth of the Valley.

The moratorium was ordered by Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver in response to a lawsuit by the city of Carmel which challenged the Carmel Valley Master Plan on the basis no environmental impact report had been prepared.

In a related development, the council approved by 4-1 vote a resolution which calls the recently-completed Carmel Valley Master Plan EIR inadequate and legally flawed. The Board of Supervisors is to hold a hearing on the EIR Feb. 2.

"There seems to be an enormous neglect by our supervisors, who act either feebly or foolishly," Norberg told the council. "The appalling thing is that the supervisors have been playing fast and loose with this moratorium.

"The latest example is the Crossroads development at the mouth of the Valley, which is zoned R-3 (multi-family residential). How is the county able to keep developing enormous structures with the moratorium still in effect?

"I ask you to consider whether there has been an abuse of the county's use permit authority by permitting structures in the R-3 zone to be built in the floodplain. There has been acknowledged for years a floodplain disaster potential there."

Councilman Frank Lloyd said he is perplexed that development seems to continue at the mouth of the Valley — with effects upon Carmel residents — despite the moratorium and the efforts of citizens to control growth.

"A number of us have gone to Salinas and yet the growth continues to come," Lloyd said. "It's a serious situation at the county level. Something is awry in county government."

"Things have gotten a little overwhelming," said Councilman Mike Brown. "The county just seems to be going ahead with development."

The countil adopted in the form of a resolution comments prepared by Carmel Valley attorney Alexander Henson on the Carmel Valley Master Plan EIR.

HENSON, as special counsel to the city, brought the lawsuit which caused the moratorium and preparation of the EIR.

The environmental impact report does not consider adequately the "trigger" mechanisms to control development as proposed by both the city of Carmel and the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, Henson's report states.

The mechanisms would halt development whenever air, water, traffic, and noise pollution reach certain desigated levels. The fact those devices are not considered "makes a mockery of the final EIR process," Henson said.

Their omission constitutes a violation of the California Environmental Quality Act which requires that "no public agency shall approve any project having significant adverse environmental impacts unless changes have been included which mitigate or avoid those impacts.

"How can Monterey County make such a determination absent an analysis of the mitigation measures proposed by the city," Henson asked. "The obvious answer is that the county can not make that determination until the final EIR is amended to reflect this analysis."

Especially onerous is the EIR's lack of any serious attention to noise levels in Carmel Valley, and the absence of a noise contour map of the Valley, as specifically requested by the city of Carmel, Henson noted.

City Atty. George Brehmer told the council that despite the fact the Carmel Valley Master Plan EIR "has received more scrutiny than any EIR in Monterey County and probably in California," these omissions are "a significant legal flaw" in the document which should be corrected before certification.

"It appears things have to get pretty bad before the brakes are put on in the Valley," said Councilman Frank Lloyd. "It seems a shame that the quality of our life has to deteriorate before somebody decides to do something about it."

"The fact they are not considering these measures is just another case of our supervisors choosing to disregard the needs of the people of Carmel, Carmel Valley and Monterey County," Councilman Howard Brunn remarked.

Mayor Barney Laiolo cast the only "no" vote on the EIR resolution because "it's not the city's position to fight the battles of Carmel Valley.

"We've spent $45,000 in legal fees, and I haven't seen the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association spending any money on this. I don't think it's fair to the city, when we are only indirectly affected, while the people who get all the benefits just sit back and have a good time."

FORD SHOULD WORRY

Last Wednesday afternoon, while out for a pleasure drive with a party of Carmel friends, the Ford car which Rev. Walter Moffatt, the rector of All Saints, was driving, took fire, as the result of the gasoline tank exploding.

Fortunately those in the car got out without injury. Several cypress trees close to the blazing machine were badly scorched. R.J. McCabe of Pebble Beach, near which the accident occurred, assisted in extinguishing the fire. The car can be repaired.

HOMESICK JEWELER RETURNS

In a fit of homesickness for Carmel, Charles Frank, who moved his jewelry shop to Monterey Jan. 1, piled all of his stock and fixtures into a huge truck last Monday, and returned to the village. Fortunately his old location on Dolores St. was still unrented, and Mary Dummage, his former landlady, let him have it back at the old rent.

"I'm glad to be back," said Mr. Frank, his face wreathed in smiles, "and my advice to Carmelites is this: Don't ever move out of the village. If you do, you'll never be happy till you return. I thought I was making a wise business move when I left town to occupy a store three times as large in Monterey. Maybe it was a wise business move, but business isn't everything."

HAS THE SIREN BEEN THOROUGHLY TESTED?

Carmel Volunteer Fire Department is having a noisy and educational week which started Monday with the unwinsome blasts of the new fire siren and has continued with drills for the 35 members every evening.

The drills are held at the firehouse under the supervision of a Mr. Sellers from the state department of adult education, division of fire training, and have to do with handling small tools and salvage equipment. The sessions run from 7 to 10 and each is initiated with a "try out" of the new siren.

The last drill will be held tomorrow night, Fire Chief Williams Smith promises the community.

Will 1982 be the gateway for Orwell's 1984?

EDITOR'S NOTE: As federal budget cuts deepen, what will be the effect on civil rights and Constitutional freedoms? For a local perspective on this national concern, we asked Richard Wiley of Carmel, executive director of the Monterey County chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union to provide us with this article.

1982 WILL be the year of cutbacks on civil rights, civil liberties and constitutional rights in general. Last year, the budget-related economic program occupied the center of the stage. Now, the Administration will move on to other objectives.

The shape of this program was foreshadowed a year ago. At that time, the Heritage Foundation, a right-wing, "think tank" with close ties to the Reagan inner circle, presented its "blue-print for the construction of a conservative government." The keynote of its "rights" program was stated in these words: "It is axiomatic that individual liberties are secondary to the requirement of national security and internal civil order." To an alarminng degree, the Reagan administration is following the script.

The self-designation, "conservative" merits some examination, for it bears little resemblance to the dictionary's definition of "conservative" as "tending to favor preservation of the existing order." Far from preserving the existing constitutional system of individual liberties, the Heritage Foundation proposes a drastic restructuring.

The Constitution was carefully drafted to ensure that certain "unalienable" rights could not be subordinated to anything. The First Amendment's command that "Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech, of of the press . . ." is without restrictive clauses. The First Amendment sought, among other things, to guarantee that the people, from whom governmental authority is derived, would have access to the information essential to informed decision-making. Without the "right to know" and the right to dissent, democracy becomes a form without substance.

During the Cold War and the Vietnam eras, secrecy in government compounded the tragic mistakes — such as the concealment of the CIA's involvement in the Tonkin Gulf incident and the illegal bombings in Cambodia. The FBI's massive, secret, illegal war on freedom of dissent further deprived the electorate of information and opinions. Following Watergate, when the facts of government misconduct began to be known to the public, important reforms were instituted to restore open, Constitutional government.

The Reagan-Heritage Foundation blueprint would reverse this process. Passage of the Agents Identities Protection Act (S.391) would for the first time criminalize the exposure of undercover agents of the CIA, FBI and other intelligence agencies, even when the information is derived from public sources. Already passed by the House, S.391 is expected to reach the Senate floor early this year. If it passes as expected, journalists will face federal prison terms if they dare to write exposes of such CIA operations as "destabilization" of foreign governments (as in Chile) which include specific documentation.

A RECENT Presidential executive order relaxes intelligence agency guidelines and, for the first time, specifically authorizes the CIA to conduct covert operations at home. This is alarming enough in itself, when one remembers such CIA exploits as Operation CHAOS, which used agents provocateurs to disrupt the antiwar movement. With the passage of S.391, the exposure and expulsion of such a CIA agent from one's organization could constitute a federal felony.

A pending Executive Order would vastly increase the number of government documents withheld from the public. The more than 20,000 government officials authorized to classify documents would be given almost unlimited discretion, and the declassification of documents would be virtually stopped. At the stroke of the President's pen, the reach of the Freedom of Information Act will be limited by the new classification standards. Additional measures are in process to legislate further limits on the FOIA by granting broad exemptions to the intelligence and law enforcement agencies.

Since 1974, the Freedom of Information Act made public irrefutable evidence of massive constitutional violations by the FBI, CIA and other agencies, which directly and indirectly affected millions of U.S. citizens. With this deterrent removed, and the cloaks of secrecy restored, intelligence and law enforcement agencies may again target citizens for the sole reason that they are exercising their Constitutionally-protected First Amendment rights.

As a final step to restore the full panoply of mechanisms which repressed our freedoms in the McCarthy and subsequent eras, the Administration is supporting the move to revive the notorious Un-American Activities Committee. Representative Larry McDonald, a Georgia leader of the John Birch Society, has already collected two thirds of the signatures needed to re-establish HUAC in the House.

The Reagan Administration is also supporting the program of the "Moral Majority" and its allies to overturn a landmark decision of the U.S. Supreme Court, and ban abortions and some birth control devices. A constitutional amendment (SJR 110) to achieve the first step of this program has been approved by a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee chaired by its chief sponsor, Sen. Orrin Hatch.

A repressive federal criminal code, S.1630, has been passed by the Senate Judiciary Committee and awaits action on the Senate floor. A fourth generation descendant of Senate Bill One, the current administration proposal is even worse than its immediate predecessor which died in the last Congress.

In civil rights, the administration has already carried out many of the Heritage Foundation's recommendations to abandon or dilute enforcement of anti-discrimination measures, including those relating to employment of women and minorities.

The Reagan administration is moving steadily toward the creation of a foundation for a new era of McCarthyism, the negation of the hard-won advances of the civil rights movement, and the relegation of women to second class status.

Will 1982 be the gateway to George Orwell's 1984? We, the people — all of us — will bear the responsibility to see that this does not happen.

Free smoke alarms for Carmel residents

SERVICE organizations have joined with the Carmel Foundation and Carmel Volunteer Fire Department to provide smoke alarms to Carmel residents.

The program — dubbed Operation Lifesaver — will be kicked off with initial contributions of $250 each from the Carmel Host Lions, Carmel Rotary, and Carmel Kiwanis, said Greg Cellitti, Rotary community service chairman.

There will be no charge for either the smoke alarm or installation, but those who wish to make a donation to defray costs may do so, Cellitti said.

"The goal is to get a smoke alarm in everyone's house in Carmel," he explained. "We hope the program will become self-perpetuating."

The initial $750 donation from the service clubs will be deposited in a special savings account at Bank of Carmel. Estimated cost of the smoke alarms is about $10, Cellitti said.

Carmel residents who would like to have a smoke alarm installed should call the Carmel Foundation at 624-1588 between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. and ask for Operation Lifesaver.

Their names will be forwarded to the service club and volunteer fire department members who will install the alarms. A follow-up file will be maintained by the Carmel Foundation and the volunteer fire department to have the alarms checked annually for batteries and maintenance, Cellitti said.

Initial area of concentration for Operation Lifesaver is the area bounded by Pescadero Canyon to the north, Hatton Canyon to the east, and the Carmel River to the south.

Cellitti said he anticipates that other service clubs in Carmel Valley will initiate similar programs as a result of Operation Lifesaver. The idea was born several months ago after a Carmel resident died in a residential blaze. Fire officials said a smoke alarm could have prevented the fatality.

"There's no reason why every house shouldn't have a smoke alarm when you can purchase one for just the cost of a couple of drinks," Cellitti said.

Pooches and pickups often part company

By JUDITH A. EISNER

THIS HAS been a very teeter-tottery weekend for local dogs. We mean that quite literally, for in the course of our travels through Carmel and Carmel Valley we have encountered innumerable open-bed and pick-up trucks bearing one, two and even three dogs. And, almost inevitably, as we watched these dogs, the truck bearing them would slow or take a curve and the dogs would lurch about, gripping frantically to avoid falling off their precarious perch.

We learned from one of our local veterinarians' offices that they are called upon to treat a large number of dogs who have been seriously injured either by falling off an open truck, or through the combined effects of the fall and then being struck by an another car. Usual injuries include fractured pelvises, broken legs, ribs, backs, cuts and internal injuries.

We can understand the dilemma faced by the dog owner whose transportation is limited to a pickup truck. The truck's cab only seats two, perhaps three people. He has one or more large dogs and no other place to put them. So into the open back of the truck they go. Unfortunately, he is probably unaware of the dangers these rides present to his dogs.

The most obvious problems encountered by dogs who ride with their heads out of the car or in an open truck are foreign bodies in the eyes and ears. All kinds of wind-blown and road-surface objects fly at them and often something lodges in the dog's eye. It can be a cinder or a splinter or a foxtail, but frequently it requires veterinary care to remove it and repair the damage.

DOGS' EARS are very sensitive. As the onrushing draft blows into them when the dog rides with his head in the wind, not only can foreign bodies be lodged deep in the ear, but inflammation or otitis may occur. If you watch a dog riding in this position, you will notice that he may shake his head frequently as if his ears bother him.

Dogs, unlike their feline friends, lack a good sense of balance. Put a cat in a dangerous position and it will unsheath its claws, dig in and cling for dear life. Cats, as we all know, are capable of assessing and successfully completing difficult leaps that would leave the average dog dumbfounded.

Because of the nature of a dog's toenails, they are better suited for digging holes than grasping. On a flat, smooth, swaying surface, dogs are forced to grip and hang on as best they can. The chances of their being able to successfully ride out a sudden stop or a sharp curve are not good — which is why so many of them are flung off the back of trucks.

Once a dog loses his grip and is thrown from a moving vehicle, only good luck will prevent serious injury. If he falls wrong, he may be run over by his master's rear wheels. Or the impact of the fall may break bones. Or, perhaps worst of all, he may fall and be struck by the car behind or an oncoming car.

Oddly enough, the drivers of these trucks are often unaware that their dog has fallen off the back. The truck may be dozens or even hundreds of miles away before the dog is missed. In these cases, it is extremely difficult to locate the lost dog.

If you have dogs and enjoy taking them with you, there are certain minimum precautions you should take for their safety.

IF YOUR ONLY transportation is an open bed truck and the dogs must ride there, you can easily build a comfortable cage or coop to contain them. We have seen trucks with "kennels" built in the back and these may be either permanent or removable. They can be made out of tongue-and-groove siding or plywood with a wire mesh front, thus affording the dog shelter from wind and weather, yet permitting him to see out. You can affix a hasp and padlock to the door of this "truck kennel" so that no one can steal or molest your pets should you have to leave them alone. Put an old rug or blanket in the bottom and the dog will ride in safety and comfort.

Dogs are frequently injured when riding in passenger cars as well as in trucks. Small dogs have been known to fall out of car windows on a sharp curve, or any dog is capable of leaping through an open window (or off the back of a truck) when he sees another dog or something he really wants to investigate.

All dogs should be taught to ride on the back seat of an auto. Because seat belts don't fit dogs, the unanchored pet riding in the front seat becomes a potential "missile" that can slam into — or through — the windshield at a sudden stop. Just watch your dog slipping on the car upholstery as he seeks to balance himself and you'll see what we mean.

If you have a station wagon, you can install a pet barrier across the rear compartment for your dogs. Or, if you have a commercial dog crate, it can easily be kept in the rear. That way, the dogs are safely confined and cannot jump back and forth over the seat backs.

Under no circumstances should a dog be tied or chained to the back of an open truck for fear he might hang if he slipped or fell off. In this case, the dog is probably better off taking his chances with other cars than being choked and dragged by his master's vehicle.

In cars, no window the dog can reach should be opened more than two inches. That way he cannot get his head through the window or fall out.

If you ride with an unconfined dog, he should be taught not to jump back and forth over the seat and not to pester the driver. Small dogs should not be permitted to ride on the driver's lap — an abuse many women are guilty of. Driving requires one's full attention; you can hardly concentrate on the road when your dog is on your lap, halfway out the window and tangled in the steering wheel.

Father Farrell's wisdom

God governs

in the affairs of man

Invocation to the Carmel Rotary
Jan. 13, 1982

When the City of Monterey was only 17 years old, 195 years ago, that incredible American, 80 years old, Benjamin Franklin, spoke at the Constitutional Convention. "The longer I live, the more convincing proofs I see in this truth, that God governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without His aid? We have been assured in Sacred Writings that 'except the Lord, build the House, they labor in vain that build it.' I firmly believe this; and I also believe that without His concuring aid, we shall succeed in this political building no better than the builders of Babel; we shall be divided by our little partial, local interests and our projects will be confounded." Later he said, "This government can only end in despotism, as others have done before when the people shall become so corrupted as to need despotic government, being incapable of any other."

Some sixty-odd years ago when I was a lad, Carmel had one policeman, Chief Gus Englund. He and his horse were as cherished as that Lone Cypress. Today, there are more crimes committed in Carmel in a week than were committed in the whole of Monterey County in a year, a half a century ago. With justifiable concern, we ask what has happened when we cannot walk our streets in safety by day or by night? It has become more dangerous to leave our barred and burglar-proofed homes than it was for the early settlers to leave Ft. Apache during Geronimo's wildest depredations.

Oh, Lord grant us whatever it takes to bring peace, order, safety and tranquility to our troubled communities and Nation. Help us to reform every facet of government without reverting to despotism which Benjamin Franklin tells us is inevitable unless we curb corruption. Finally, apropos to nothing except that Benjamin Franklin proposed that our national bird be the turkey, we repeat the words emblazoned on a Christmas Tee-shirt "It's hard to soar like an eagle when you're living with turkeys."

Feldendrais workshop is offered in Carmel

A demonstration workshop in the Feldenkrais Method of Awareness Through Movement will be given Wednesday, Jan. 27 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. at Sunset Center, Carmel.

The method, created by Israeli physicist Moshe Feldenkrais, uses a series of movement sequences to improve the nervous system and the use of the body. The method teaches people to use their bodies more effectively. Typically, its students claim not only improved functioning in movement but a profound internal experience and a clearer sense of self.

Michael Purcell, authorized by Dr. Feldenkrais to teach the method, will lead the workshop. Purcell comes to Carmel from Cambridge, Mass., where he organized the first holistic health clinic in the Boston area.

The workshop meets in the Babcock Room at Sunset Center, Carmel. There is a $5 fee. For more information, phone 624-3996.

Symphony concerts to feature artistry of pianist Byron Janis

The Monterey County Symphony will perform the third concert series of its 1981-82 season, featuring pianist Byron Janis on Sunday, Jan. 24 at King Hall, Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey; Monday Jan. 25 at Sunset Theater, Carmel; and Tuesday, Jan. 26 at Sherwood Hall, Salinas. All performances begin at 8 p.m.

Maestro Haymo Taeuber will conduct the concerts which include Verdi's I Vespri Siciliani Overture, Franz Schubert's Symphony No. 8 (the "Unfinished"), and, in honor of Igor Stravinsky's 100th birthday, The Firebird Suite. Byron Janis will perform the Piano Concerto No. 3 in C Major by Sergei Prokofieff.

The Prokofieff concerto was composed between the years 1917 and 1921, and premiered at a concert of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in 1922. The work has been called a "brilliant concerto which doesn't even try to be anything other than difficult technically, prodigious to perform and a dazzler all around."

Byron Janis has been praised as one of the "most exalting pianists of our age." The Philadelphia Bulletin wrote: "Byron Janis has his own kind of chiselled fire, dazzling command of every note he touches . . . he is defensibly the finest American pianist before the public today."

Tickets to the Carmel concert are available at Carmel Music, Dolores Street, Carmel. Sherwood Hall tickets may be purchased at Gadsby's Music Store, Old Town Salinas and at Books & Books, Main St. Mall, Salinas. Seating at King Hall is limited and any available tickets may be purchased through the symphony office. Tickets are $6.50 for adults. Special senior citizen and student discounts are available for the Salinas concert.

Due to the demand for tickets, the symphony office requests that ticket holders who are not able to attend the concert turn in their tickets for resale.

For further information, phone 624-8511.

PIANIST BYRON JANIS, who has been praised as one of the "most exalting pianists of our age," will be the featured performer of the Monterey County Symphony third concert series. Festival of Dance to present tribute to Pavlova

The Carmel Festival of Dance will present The Pavlova Celebration, an evening in dance in tribute to Anna Pavlova, on Tuesday, Jan. 26 at 8 p.m., in Sunset Theater, Carmel.

Anna Pavlova. Her name is legend. She represents all that is artistic and spiritual in ballet. Her impact on the world of artistic appreciation is immeasurable.

Pavlova brought the traditions of Russia's Imperial Ballet to America first as one of its greatest stars in St. Petersburg and London. Later, she toured with her own company in evenings of divertissments created to demonstrate qualities that were uniquely hers.

Pavlova's contribution to ballet in the years of its infancy is considered directly responsible for the vast and enthusiastic appreciation of today.

The Pavlova Celebration commemorates the centennial of her birth. It is a re-creation of an evening of ballets originally performed by Pavlova and her company during the early 1900s.

The special artistry of Starr Danias, principal ballerina for the Joffrey Ballet, is suited to represent the art of Anna Pavlova. Danias's ethereal classicism and likeness of technique are well known to ballet audiences throughout the country. She has appeared in the film The Turning Point, on the Phil Donahue Show, The Love Boat, and was the first ballerina to appear on the Academy Awards.

A full company of dancers, specially selected to adhere to the high artistic aspirations of the Celebration, will support Danias. Gregory King, formerly of the National Ballet of Canada, the Joffrey Ballet, and the Jose Greco Dance Company, will partner her in several of the Pavlova divertissments.

The evening will follow the structure of the Pavlova evenings with landmark ballet, including The Dying Swan, making up the first part of the program. The second half will be devoted to a full act of Giselle.

Reserved seat tickets are $7.75 and $6.75. For more information, phone the Sunset Center office, 624-3996.

THE PAVLOVA CELEBRATION, starring Starr Danias and Gregory King, brings to life the legendary ballet form of Anna Pavlova at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 26 at the Sunset Theater, Carmel. The Pavlova Celebration, a re-creation of an evening of ballet originally performed by Pavlova and her company during the early 1900s, commemorates the centennial of her birth.

Flamenco guitarist to perform Saturday

Flamenco guitarist Juan Serrano will appear in concert Saturday, Jan. 23, 8 p.m., at Sunset Theater, Carmel.

Son of a professional guitarist, Serrano was born in Cordoba, Spain in 1936. He credits his father's strict supervision with the development of a technical facility that has won him high praise.

Cordoba is known for its flamenco guitarists, but young Juan Serrano made his reputation early. He has such a following in his home town that the clock in the public square sounds the hours with bars from his flamenco recordings!

In 1962, Serrano first visited the U.S. with a Spanish dance company. He had already created a name for himself in Europe and South America as a guitarist of extraordinary talent. When the dance company tour ended, he decided to remain in this country and pursue a career as soloist.

Among his artistic achievements are a performance at the State Department at the request of President John Kennedy. In 1966 he was awarded an Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree from Fairfield University in Fairfield, Conn.

Serrano appears in concerts throughout the U.S. and South America from September to June and teaches at his studio in Fresno. He spends the rest of the year with his family in Spain and performing in Europe.

Tickets for the Carmel concert are $7.50 general, $6.50 for seniors and $4.50 for students and children under 12. They are available at Bartlett Music, Carmel; Do Re Mi Music, The Barnyard; The Record Cove, Monterey; and at the box office the evening of the performance.

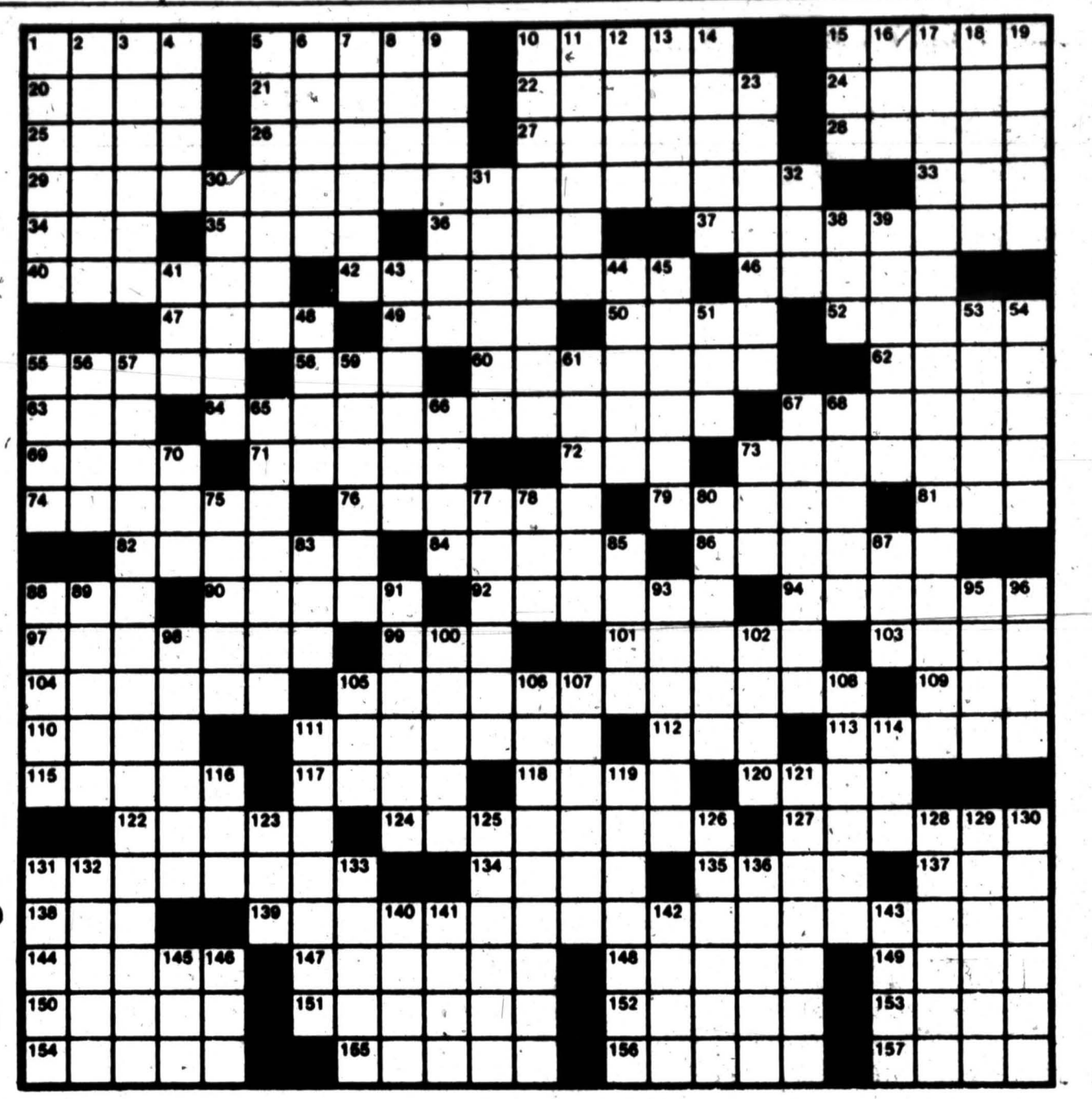

FLAMENCO GUITARIST Juan Serrano will appear in concert Saturday, Jan. 23 at 8 p.m. at Sunset Theatre, Carmel. Widely acclaimed here and abroad, Serrano concertises extensively. He also performed in Carmel last year.

Film review:

'Tattoo' fails to satisfy

By LISA JENSEN

Bruce Dern has played the twisted looney so well for so long, he could probably take out a patent on the role. He brings all his familiar tricks (haunted eyes, guarded drawl and wild grin) to the demented protagonist he plays in Tattoo, yet his performance, like the film itself, is surprisingly thoughtful. Ultimately, however, Tatoo somehow fails to satisfy. It's big on atmosphere, and often hypnotic to watch, but it never really amounts to much.

Dern plays Karl Kinski, a soft-spoken loner who, as a serviceman stationed in Japan, became entranced with the ancient art of tattooing and now runs his own tattoo parlor in New Jersey. Karl's psyche has been damaged by a brutalizing father and a neurotic family, and he has trouble with intimate relationships. When not relieving his sexual tensions in Times Square peep shows (by instructing bored hookers to fondle themselves through a glass partition), he seeks to establish beauty and serenity in his troubled life through the artistry of tattooing.

After Karl is hired to paint some of his designs on swimsuit models for a high-fashion magazine layout, he meets beautiful fashion model Maddy Summers (Maud Adams). Her candid sensuality and professional carelessness about her body overwhelms, teases and repels Karl all at once, and he gradually becomes obsessed with her. After a couple of disastrous "dates" make it impossible for him to reach her through normal channels, the desperate Karl kidnaps Maddy from her swank apartment and imprisons her at the abandoned family beach house on the Jersey shore.

To its credit, Tattoo is more psychological thriller than slasher movie. Karl isn't interested in anything as mundane as rape or mutilation; in fact, to him, Maddy isn't his victim but his Galatea, a living canvas for the ultimate expression of his art. By tattooing her (even against her will, if necessary), Karl not only makes his one bid for immortality as an artist, but seeks to possess and dominate the unattainable woman of his dreams by "protecting" her with his own, indelible "mark."

The film is relatively restrained in exploring the psycho-sexual tension in Karl's and Maddy's peculiar relationship that is its main theme. The steamy sex touted in a recent Playboy spread has apparently been cut back to a single, rather tame scene at the end of the film, where the focus is less on eroticism than on the eerie lyricism of elaborately illustrated flesh.

And the film tries not to exploit Maddy as a mere woman-in-bondage cliche. In a scene in which Karl forces her to act out his sexual fantasy, the filmmakers generally succeed in making us feel and identify with Maddy's humiliation and explosive rage rather than Karl's pitiful excitement.

But the trouble with Tattoo is that once it's established these characters, it has nowhere to go. Most of the last few plot twists are merely red herrings, tacked on in hopes of stretching out an already over-extended idea. (Much is made, for instance, of Maddy finding and hiding a shard of broken glass as a possible weapon against her captor, though she already has access to a kitchen full of knives and a fireplace poker in her own room.)

And the final lovemaking scene that ends the film isn't quite credible in the context of what we know about the characters, despite the super-charged atmosphere. Suddenly, Karl and Maddy completely abandon their wary, tormented relationship for an overly idyllic frolic among the satin pillows, and the whole interlude comes across as a meaningless climax to a story that has no real conclusion. Like so many nearly good movies, Tattoo is more interesting for what it tries to do than for anything it actually achieves.

Sunset Views

Recreation of Pavlova

By RICHARD TYLER

Next Tuesday evening, Jan. 26, in tribute to the legendary ballerina Anna Pavlova, Starr Danias, principal dancer for the Joffrey Ballet; Gregory King, and a company of twelve dancers will take over the stage of Sunset Center Theater with a full length dance program to honor the centenary of Pavlova's birth.

A mythic figure in dance history, Pavlova (1881-1931) remains a muse to contemporary dancers. For Miss Danias, Pavlova's influence is quite strong. "Ever since I was a child, I was inspired by photographs of Pavlova," Miss Danias said as she and her husband, Douglas Wassell, who are co-producers of the Pavlova Celebration, sat in their living room overlooking Lincoln Center in Manhattan. "She can easily be compared to a ballerina today. Her point work was extraordinary."

"Pavlova's sense of freedom through the upper body, the head and arms was extraordinary," Miss Danias says. "She fascinated everyone with her mystique, her glamour. There was a sensuality about her movement; she had points as strong as steel and her legs could have been compared to any dancer of today."

The format of the Pavlova Celebration will be similar to the programs on Pavlova's own tours. There will be a substantial opening work followed by a series of divertissements. The second half of the program will be a concert version of a full-length classical ballet...in this case, Giselle.

"We hope to inspire the public by giving them an example of what was done by Pavlova and her company," Miss Danias says. "I am an interpreter; I do not mimic Pavlova. I'm not studying her films, but rather I am interpreting her in my own way."

Much detective work has been involved for Miss Danias and Mr. Wassell to construct the program. Only some of Pavlova's work still exists, but their sources have brought parts of the Pavlova repertory back to life.

"Two inspiring women were really at the beginning of it all — Muriel Stuart from the School of American Ballet and Ruth Page," Miss Danias said. "Both learned directly from Pavlova and taught the choreography, nuance by nuance to me."

Miss Stuart has restaged Pavlova's Dragonfly as well as The Dying Swan, her famous solo, choreographed by Michel Fokine. "The Dragonfly and The Dying Swan absolutely kill the legs," Miss Danias said smiling. "Muriel said that Anna Pavlova gave her the Dragonfly solo as an exercise to strengthen her legs, but it's such a killer." Ruth Page, the American dancer and Chicago-based ballet director, was also a member of Pavlova's company in 1918 and toured South America with her. The 75-year-old dancer taught Miss Danias three divertissements: Polka Pizzicato, a demanding piece for five women; Idylle, danced to the Minute Waltz by Chopin; and Autumn Bacchanale, a euphoric, orgiastic duet.

Two other works were added to the program by Irine Fokine, Pavlova's goddaughter. Two new divertissements have been choreographed in the spirit of Pavlova by Mr. Wassell, who is a highly respected ballet teacher with the David Howard School of Ballet.

The second half of the evening will be the concert version of Giselle, mentioned earlier, restaged by Alexander Bennett.

Since Miss Danias and Mr. Wassell are co-producers of the Pavlova Celebration, their working relationship has joined their seven-year marriage. "One's shortcomings are another's strengths," Miss Danias said. "It was one of those things that was just meant to be; we were meant to be together in this life."

Among the twelve dancers supporting Miss Danias and Mr. King will be several familiar dancers from the Eglevsky Company: Roseanne Germer, Martha Purl, Linda Gelinas, Jennifer Grisette, and Kimberlee Raines.

"I think Anna Pavlova was way ahead of her time," Miss Danias concluded. "She went to the tiniest towns in Texas. Anton Dolin says that she brought glamor and mystique to the art of ballet. She was constantly involved with other artist. Her whole life was an art in all its forms."

There is some reserved seating still available at the director's office at Sunset Center. For more information, please call 624-3996.

Backgammon

A premature double

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, are on roll in the diagrammed position. What should you do? (Note that you have a man on the bar.)

It won't help you to roll the dice since you can't come in from the bar or move any man no matter what you roll. Nevertheless, since it is your turn you have the right to double—but you shouldn't do so.

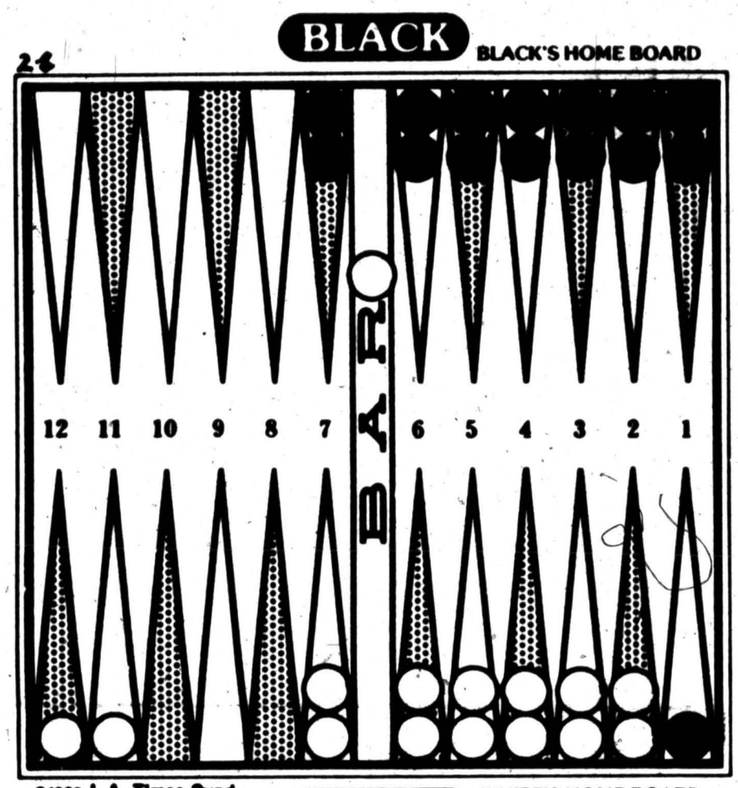

If you double, Black will resign with a sigh of relief. He cannot get his blot out of your home board; and he will have to break up his own home board, thus allowing you to come in and get out.

You are virtually sure to win the game, and you have a fair chance for a gammon if you hit a second blot and shut both out of your home board. If you don't get a second man back you can double at any time and Black will promptly resign.

There are two points to this discussion: first, that you have the right to double even when you are on the bar against a closed board; and, second, that having the right to double doesn't make the double right.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Splendid opera at Hidden Valley

By LYN BRONSON

AFTER A SILENCE of many months, Hidden Valley burst forth on the Peninsula music scene last week with splendid productions of Rossini's La Cenerentola and Verdi's La Traviata.

La Cenerentola, Rossini's comic opera version of the Cinderella tale, translated very successfully into English by Donald Pippin, opened the season with style, wit and enormous energy. The set, created by Richard Seeger and James Day, was ingeniously designed for an instant quick change accomplished in full view of the audience. Both the set and the costumes by John Pasqualetti featured muted colors which complemented each other and never distracted the listener from the opera itself.

One of the most interesting aspects of the production was the imaginative choreography. Never have I seen a production which impressed so much with the constant rhythmic movement of the cast. No one ever seemed to stand still. Every conceivable opportunity to move the actors around the stage was utilized — with much hopping and sideways stepping.

One could only guess that the reason for some of this delightful silliness is that the dramatic action in opera often seems quite static. One small bit of plot development or characterization which might take only one moment in a play becomes tremendously extended in opera. In any case, silly or not, it really worked. And, after all, this is comic opera. The plot is a fantasy, and the people are only caricatures of real people.

The star of the evening without a doubt was Gail Dubinbaum, the mezzo-soprano who made such a brilliant showing at the Elizabeth Schwarzkopf master class last summer. As Cinderella, Miss Dubinbaum brough an effortless charm and intensity to the role. Her voice is a beautifully natural instrument which exhibits all the qualities you could possible hope for — excellent intonation, rhythmic incisiveness, flexibility and passion.

Reg Huston, as Don Magnifico, impressed not only by the authority his impressive voice brought to his role, but also by his easy acting ability and impeccable diction. Reginald Pittman, Peter Halverson, Anne Buelteman, Velvali DeAyxa and Robert Twedberg rounded out the cast and added excellent support in this production.

The skills of Musical Director and Conductor David Effron were very much in evidence. The orechestral ensemble performed with skillful control and an excellent sense of style.

The next evening, Hidden Valley treated us to its second opera of the season — Verdi's La Traviata.

One of the problems of La Traviata is its enormous popularity. Since it is one of the most familiar works in the operatic repertory, opera fans may have stored in their memory the ghosts of some significant recorded performances, such as Callas, Moffo, Sutherland, Tebaldi, Albanese, Caballe and others.

But, the very qualities which make La Traviata so popular in the first place ultimately contribute to its ability to make an excellent effect even in a less than perfect production. The freshness of Verdi's melodic inspiration and his skillful use of the orchestra in accompanying the human voice never loses their effectiveness.

However, where a production of La Traviata faces a critical test is in the role of Violetta — a ferociously demanding soprano role.

When the curtain rises in Act I, the audience must be instantly convinced that the courtesan Violetta Valery is a compelling, magnetic personality with several men competing for her favor. Initially Cyndia Siedentop, in the role of Violetta seemed to be unable to establish this kind of authority in her performances.

However, in the last two acts Miss Sieedentop began to reveal the true extent of her artistry. And what a lovely voice she has, too — full of dramatic intensity and power, yet capable of some exquisite, beautifully supported pianissimos.

Colenton Freeman as Alfredo demonstrated a rich, powerful voice, although as an actor he has not yet developed a natural stage presence.

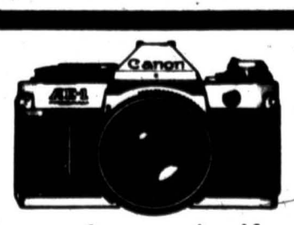

Duane Clenton Carter was magnificent in his role as Alfredo's father. In Act III, when Violetta is at death's door and he realizes the tragedy he has caused, Carter's performance is deeply moving.

Reg Huston as Baron Douphol was consistently effective. Huston always impresses with his natural manner on stage and the way he immerses himself in each new role.

The excellent sets by Richard Seeger overcame the physical limitations of the small stage at Hidden Valley, although there were times when the large cast threatened to overwhelm their surroundings.

David Effron again provided excellent musical support.

Spanish artist Jose Montanes exhibit to open at Zantman Galleries

Unusual and appealing paintings of children by Spanish artist Jose Montanes will be featured in a one-man show of his work at Zantman Art Galleries, Mission and Sixth, Carmel. A preview reception is planned Saturday, Jan. 23 from 5-8 p.m.; the public is invited.

This is the second year Montanes has been featured in a solo exhibit at Zantman Galleries. Enthusiastic response greeted the first local display of his paintings last year.

Montanes approaches his diminutive subjects with wit and understanding. He manages to convey both innocence and sophistication simultaneously. His children are cherubic, but there is a surprisingly worldly expression in their eyes which prevents the paintings from becoming cloying or sentimental.

In addition to children, Montanes paints surrealistic studies of clowns. Occasionally, adults blessed with a childlike innocence appear in his work.

He uses a rich, varied palette and incorporates interlocking planes in a cubistic manner in his paintings. Some works are executed in subtle, earthy tones, others in bright pastels to create totally different moods from similar subjects. These qualities induced even Pablo Picasso to acquire paintings by Montanes.

A native of Spain, Montanes studied art in Valencia. In 1949 he was awarded a scholarship by the French government to study at the Ecole des Beaux-Arts in Paris. Since 1952, his work has been exhibited in solo shows in many cities in Europe and the United States. Museums and private individuals all over the world include his paintings in their collections.

Zantman Galleries are open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 11-5 Sunday. For more information, phone 624-8314.

Gallery Americana opens art of nature show

Wildlife watercolors, landscapes and bronzes of wild fowl by Jim Taylor will be presented in a one-man exhibition of his work at Miner's Gallery Americana, Sixth and Lincoln, Carmel. The exhibit opens with a reception for the artist on Saturday, Jan. 23 from 4-7 p.m. and continues on view through Feb. 5.

A native of Utah, Taylor's paintings are naturalistic portrayals of the many faces of the Western landscape he has explored since childhood.

Taylor has developed an unusual watercolor/acrylic technique that best expresses the freshwater lakes and marshes, rugged mountains and the sparkling snowscapes of the West. The soft hues and subtle lighting create the atmospheric mood and underlying strength of his paintings.

His bronze birds, each species native to Utah, show fine ornothological detail coupled with artistic grace and clarity. Geese, ducks, quail and pheasant are included in the artist's repertoire.

Taylor has a bachelor's and master's degree from Brigham Young University. His work is in the collections of many banks and corporations, as well as individuals, throughout the West.

Gallery Americana is open from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. daily. For additional information, phone 624-5071.

WINTER IN UTAH is both cold and beautiful. Artist Jim Taylor captures this special flavor in a watercolor he calls Warm Winter Day. Paintings and bronzes of wild fowl are included in a one-man exhibit of his work that opens Saturday, Jan. 23 at Miner's Gallery Americana, Sixth and Lincoln, Carmel.

A Study in Angles

Nobody ever thinks much about a straight line: it starts at a point, then goes predictably forward to another point. The essence of humor, says one philosopher, is the unpredictable; that's why a pratfall is funny.

The essence of charm, too, is in the unexpected, and it comes to focus in this house. For instance, about the time you become adjusted to a steep shake roof with straight-arrow ridge pole, the gable ends are knocked off and become new triangular places. Just when you get used to flat descending surfaces, one comes down in a gentle curve above the doorway. Walls never go straight down from eaves to ground; they're indented with quaintly carved beams marking the point of change.

Inside, the surprises continue. The sunken entrance, with a curved door, is arched by a semi-hexagonal opening to the natural redwood paneled living room. This 22 x 16 chamber is replete with nooks and crannies, window seats and an extraordinary ceiling design. It's as though you were inside a mansard roof: the walls start up, then hesitate on a steep angle inward, then flatten to a wide, beamed ceiling. The textures of redwood, white plaster and a white stone fireplace blend into a richly satisfying unity.

This curiously pleasing mix is repeated in the dining room. And in the bedrooms where paneling gives way to plaster, but the same ceiling lines are repeated. There are 3 bedrooms and 3 baths, one originally maid's quarters off the kitchen, the others generous spaces on the opposite wing.

The house is on San Antonio, very near Carmel Point, one block from the beach. It's built in a U-shape with a magnificent protected patio at the center. A sizeable study (or den) is at the rear, with its own free-standing fireplace. You know how a good beef stew is better the second day? This house is like that: time has had a hand in its blending. You'll love it! $375,000.
